“Fish for Livelihoods” project aims to improve the incomes of fishers through increased fish production and reduced costs. This is achieved through integration of aquaculture and conservation practices, technology transfer, and improvement of marketing and sales strategies. The project is implemented by WorldFish Myanmar with funding from USAID.

The project targets fishers in the Sagaing and Mandalay regions, focusing on improving the sustainability and productivity of small-scale fish farms. It aims to increase fish production by providing access to improved fish seed, feed, and technology. The project also works on enhancing the marketing and sales of fish to improve the incomes of fishers.

In partnership with the Myanmar Fisheries Department, the project is expected to contribute to the national goal of increasing fish production by 30% by 2020.
