Burma News International (BNI) is pleased to present Deciphering Myanmar's Peace Process: A Reference Guide 2013, which is a compilation of information to date about the peace process in Myanmar from BNI's member organizations and various other groups. The information contained in this book is based on interviews, research and observations about the conditions that prevailed following the 2010 election period.

BNI wishes to express its profound gratitude to staff members, Mr. Sai Leik, Mr. Khoo Ai Plaisio and Ms. Donna Ong for research and writing, and Mr. Khuensai Jaiyen, Mr. Khin Maung Shwe and Mr. Brett Douglas for editing and proofreading all of the information contained in this book. We would also like to thank Ms. Nan Paw Gay and Ms. Thu Htike San for their logistical support, and all of BNI's member organization editors for their moral support and valuable resources made available to the BNI peace team.

BNI also wishes to express its heartfelt thanks to the Open Society Foundation (OSF) for its unwavering support towards BNI's efforts to support the democratization process during Myanmar's Peace Process. We would like to extend our appreciation to the Burma Relief Centre (BRC) for supporting accommodation and meeting costs incurred in the collection of information regarding the peace process in Myanmar. Additionally, we wish to extend our thanks to all donors who assisted us in this project, and who continue to support the monitoring activities of BNI.

Finally, we wish to thank all the media organizations, political parties, ethnic armed groups, Myanmar organizations both inside the country and in-exile, foreign organizations, and individuals who have contributed their services, time, energy and resources to assist our monitoring activity. BNI is very grateful for the positive working relationship it enjoys with media and human rights organizations with which we share useful information and case studies on the peace process.

Notes to the reader:

By the time this book is published and distributed, major changes and developments in the peace process will have taken place. Information included in this book was updated until Jan. 30, 2013. Nevertheless, this reference guide serves to provide all stakeholders and researchers a clear explanation of all the elements and actors involved in the current efforts for peace in the country. We have tried to collect accurate and comprehensive data to the best of our abilities through both primary and secondary sources. Due to the complex and sensitive nature of the issues surrounding both conflict and peace negotiations, it is inevitable that several gaps and errors remain. We are extremely grateful to our sources who have provided us a generous amount of information that has greatly enriched our research, and we have done our utmost to use it with respect.

The immense difficulties we faced in collecting, organizing and compiling this information for the contents of this book is a testament for the need for better monitoring and greater transparency in conducting all activities related to the peace process. While it is understandable that publicizing certain activities that are highly sensitive during negotiations and armed conflict, we have often found serious errors and contradictions in basic facts or data from media sources and other official sources. This hinders clear understanding necessary for all parties involved in pushing the peace process forward. As a result, we hope that this book will encourage more vigilant and systematic documentation for future peace activities.

Executive Summary

The new nominally civilian government is making serious efforts to achieve peace in Myanmar after more than 60 years of civil war. Peace is critical for ending human suffering and achieving stability; a precondition for overcoming poverty, ensuring long term development and protecting human rights. Most importantly, peace is essential for implementing a stable democracy. In 2015, Myanmar will become a full member of the ASEAN community in which it is responsible to meet the standards outlined in the ASEAN charter.

Although all sides want the conflict to end, achieving peace is no easy task. The protracted civil war in Myanmar is complicated not only by the sheer number of ethnic armed groups who are competing for regional and domestic interests, but also from the lack of trust and misunderstandings resulting from poor communication and transparency on all sides. Therefore it is crucial to carefully monitor the peace process to improve understanding and clarity necessary for establishing lasting peace.

This book serves as a reference guide for media outlets and stakeholders involved in the peace process. It provides an overall picture of the problems resulting from the ongoing conflicts, identifies the root causes that need to be addressed and maps out the entire structure of the peace plan. By identifying all the key actors, their interests and activities for peace, it becomes possible to make sense of the complicated relationships, as well as points of convergence and conflict related to their activities. In this sense, the information compiled in this book will help readers locate actors and events that form the larger picture to understand how they are interconnected in the peace process.

By both clarifying and tracking the developments, this book has identified some important issues that need to be addressed. One of these includes transparency; confusion and contradicting information about all of the activities is hindering the peace process. Transparency is not only key to effective policy planning and implementation, but also for overcoming distrust and building confidence between the various actors. An immediate end to the conflicts in Kachin and northern Shan state is also crucial to prevent the crisis from further spiraling out of control. At present there is a divergence between the government and ethnic road map to peace. A political settlement that details power sharing, fair distribution of natural resources and an alternative to the government's Border Guard Force (BGF) scheme that could unify all ethnic armed groups within the Union would help to bridge this current gap.

Burma News International (BNI) is a unique alliance of 11 independent media organizations, 9 of which represent different ethnic groups from Myanmar. BNI's bases of operation include Yangon and many of the countries bordering with Myanmar. Our members' extensive networks provided the means to an end to access all of the detailed information about the various ethnic armed groups, community groups and the government that is compiled in this book. As Myanmar undergoes one of the most significant political transformations in the country's history, BNI will continue to monitor and advocate for both media freedom and transparency leading towards democracy and sustainable peace.

Introduction to the Peace process

The 2010 elections in Myanmar followed by the installation of a nominally civilian government, have brought exciting developments in both economic and political liberalization. However the political transition has also reignited old conflicts and intensified sectarian violence. While the government has made impressive reforms towards dealing with the ethnic nationality problem, and achieved major headway in brokering peace deals with most of the ethnic armed groups, these ceasefires remain fragile at best. At the same time, the conflict in Kachin state and northern Shan state has intensified with no end in sight. Not only has this created a humanitarian crisis, but it also threatens the stability and potential economic growth for the entire nation. Most importantly, as the ethnic conflicts were the single legitimating factor for military rule from 1962 to 2010, the continuation of such conflicts undermines the democratic progress and even threatens to throw the country back into a military state.

The contradiction between peace efforts and ongoing violence in Kachin, Shan and Rakhine states are hindering positive developments towards a peaceful settlement. To help make sense of the complex events in Myanmar, BNI's report and website www.mmpeacemonitor.org aims to centralize and analyze information to foster more transparency, understanding, communication and trust between the various stakeholders. Past misunderstandings have fuelled suspicion and created distrust between all sides. Considering the vast number of stakeholders involved and the newly reformed government, patience is necessary for peace to take root. After more than 60 years of conflict, there is no better time than now to achieve national reconciliation that will lead to peace and a stable democracy in Myanmar.

I. The Problem

2012 Overview

Conflicts, communal violence and IDPs

The ongoing armed conflict between the Myanmar army and the Kachin Independence Organization (KIO), and allies (AA, ABSDF, TNLA), has created a severe humanitarian crisis in Kachin and northern Shan states. Not only has this caused death and destruction for armed groups and local civilians caught in the middle of the conflict zone, but it also threatens peace and security for Myanmar and its neighbors. This has led to substantial increases in poverty, lawlessness and drug production. The direct threats to both positive economic development and democratic reforms resulting from this instability highlight the urgency in finding immediate and long term solutions for resolving this crisis.

Apart from the ongoing conflict in Kachin and northern Shan states, ceasefire agreements that have been signed in all the other ethnic armed areas has seen a major decline in military activities and human rights abuses against civilians. However, The Border Consortium (TBC), formerly known as Thai Burma Border Consortium (TBBC), has reported that the Myanmar army has not withdrawn its troops, nor have they abandoned their outposts along the borderline. Troop rotations and the resupply of military rations to outposts have continued unabated. In northern Karen state and eastern Bago Region, the new reporting mechanisms on the Karen National Liberation Army (KNLA) troops' movements - stipulated in the ceasefire agreement - have strengthened the Myanmar Army's presence in these areas. At the same time, insufficient communication of troop movements have also led to skirmishes between KNLA and government troops, including the BGF. These incidents have also been happening in Shan state.

Over 100,000 civilians have been displaced from their homes by ongoing fighting between the Kachin Independence Army (KIA) and Myanmar military. About 58,282 IDPs are sheltering in Kachin-controlled areas along the Chinese border. There are also thousands of refugees in China. The rest are living in areas under government-controlled areas, including about 10,000 recently displaced persons from the Hpakant area.⁶

According to a Kachin Women's Association of Thailand (KWAT) report, villagers sheltering in Kachin-controlled territories and China have received almost no international support since the conflict started on June 9, 2011.⁷ Data compiled from local relief groups shows that international aid agencies, including the UN, have provided only 4% of the basic food needs for the displaced population. The IDPs in KIO-controlled territories and China are depending almost entirely on private donations from local and overseas compatriots. Over US$2M is needed to provide enough support for the IDPs every month. International donors have been blocked by the government in delivering sufficient aid for the displaced. The government stated that they were blocked because they feared the aid would be used to support the Kachin Independence Organization (KIO).

Palaung IDPs - Over 2,000 people from 15 villages were forced to flee their homes.⁸ Several hundred have returned to their villages in the Kutkai and Namphakar areas after fighting died down in recent months.

Communal violence:

Rakhine state (Arakan)

According to the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (UNOCHA) as of Nov.4, 2012, the Myanmar government has stated that over 110,000 people have been displaced in Rakhine state. About 74,800 were displaced from the June, 2012 unrest and 36,400 from the October, 2012 unrest.¹²

Affected areas:

Townships currently under curfew (11): Buthidaung, Kyaukpyu, Kyauktaw, Maungdaw, Minbya, Mrauk-U, Myebon, Pauktaw, Ramree, Rathedaung and Sittwe

IDP camps (9 townships): Kyaukpyu, Kyauktaw, Minbya, Mrauk-U, Myebon, Pauktaw, Ramree, Rathedaung and Sittwe

Thailand: There are currently 92,000 registered refugees as well as an estimated 54,000 unregistered asylum-seekers from Myanmar living in 9 camps along the Thai-Myanmar border. Following the 2010 Myanmar general elections in November, there was an influx of 16,000-18,000 civilians after clashes between ethnic armed groups and the Myanmar army erupted along the border. While they were allowed to stay temporarily, state authorities made them return shortly after fighting ceased. In some cases they were forced back, only hours after mortar fire was reported. An estimated 5,000 people still remain in areas along the Thai-Myanmar border. Sporadic fighting has been reported to be ongoing in the area of southeastern Myanmar. Despite the reforms by the new Myanmar government, the numbers of unregistered camp residents continues to grow. Refugees and asylum-seekers living outside the camps are regarded as illegal migrants under Thai immigration law and subject to arrest, detention and deportation by both the police and Thai army.¹⁴

Bangladesh: There are more than 29,000 refugees from Myanmar's northern Rakhine state. They reside in 2 camps in Kutupalong and Nayapara in Bangladesh's south-eastern district of Cox's Bazar. This population is mostly what remains of the 250,000 refugees from Myanmar who arrived in 1991, most of whom subsequently returned home. The Bangladesh government estimates that more than 200,000 unregistered civilians from Myanmar live in Bangladesh without any legal status, mostly in the villages outside the camps, but also in host communities. Up to 40,000 live adjacent to Kutupalong and Nayapara camps, forming two settlements called the Kutupalong Makeshift Site and Leda Site.¹⁵

India: According to official figures as of Nov.30, 2012, there are 7,427 refugees and 2,912 asylum seekers from Myanmar in India.¹⁶ According to other sources, there are around 110,000 Chin refugees that live in India, mainly in bordering states Mizoram and Manipur.¹⁷ In addition to Chin refugees, there are also communities of Kachin, Rakhine, Bama and Rohingya from Myanmar living in India. Around 3,000-4,000 are registered with the UNHCR in the capital New Delhi.¹⁸

Increased drug trade

According to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), Myanmar is the second largest opium producing country in the world accounting for 25% of estimated production. It also remains a major source of methamphetamine pills and opiates in Southeast Asia.¹⁹ Despite positive political reforms, since 2011 the UNODC report South-East Asia Opium Survey 2012 - Lao PDR, Myanmar estimates that Myanmar poppy cultivation has jumped 17% to 51,000 hectares in 2012 (up from 43,000 ha in 2011) in spite of government claims to have eradicated 23,717 ha of poppy cultivation - more than three times the 7,058 ha that they eradicated in 2011.²⁰ Poppy cultivation in Myanmar increased from 21,600 ha in 2006 to 51,000 ha in 2012. This contrasts with the downward trend of opium production in the country from 1998-2006, after cultivation was reduced by 83%.

According to the UNODC's research, the center of Myanmar's illicit drugs activities remains in Shan state, which accounts for 90% of poppy cultivation in the country, with the remaining 10% located mainly in Kachin state. In 2012, large increases of cultivation were reported by UNODC in south, east and north areas of Shan state, as well as in Kachin state. UNODC estimates that 300,000 Myanmar households are involved in poppy cultivation, a 17% increase from 2011 (256,000 households).

In comparison, the SHAN Drug Watch Newsletter, published in June, 2012 found that 21 out of 22 townships (or 18 out of 20 by today's count - after the government reorganized some of the townships) targeted for opium elimination under the government's 15-year master plan to permanently eliminate drugs from 1999-2014, are still growing poppy. During the last season from 2011-12, their researchers were able to visit previously unvisited townships to confirm that 49 out of 55 townships in Shan State were growing poppies.²¹ Aside from Shan state, the report finds that areas in Magwe and Sagaing regions, and Kachin, Kayah (Karenni), Chin and Rakhine states are also producing opium. Of these only Kachin, Kayah and Chin states are targeted in the government's 15-year plan.

Most of the drugs are traded on the world market, passing through China and Laos via the Golden Triangle, before continuing through Thailand and other Southeast Asia countries before reaching the rest of the world. Precursor chemicals are trafficked from neighboring countries for the production of methamphetamine tablets. India reported that reforms in Myanmar have led to an increase in Indian drug trafficking.²² The Indian Narcotics Control Bureau seized 1 million pseudo-ephedrine tablets destined for Myanmar in 2012.

Causes for increased drug production and trade despite political reforms

The major cause in the increases of drug production has been attributed to ongoing instability and conflict. In a survey done by the UNODC that asked farmers why they grow poppy, 79% said they were cultivating it because of the higher net income generated in relation to other crops, while 45% cited the need to buy food. In addition, in 95% of the villages in Shan state that were surveyed, residents said they received no agricultural assistance from the government. In rural mountainous areas that face economic hardships, and where other crops are difficult to grow, cultivating poppy is key for their survival. Some BGF, PMF and Myanmar armed groups also continue to collect taxes from poppy plantations, taking advantage of non-existent law enforcement in these areas.

The SHAN Drug Watch report identifies three main reasons for increases of poppy cultivation:

1. farmers are impoverished therefore necessary for survival
2. rebels need to generate funds to buy weapons for armed conflicts against the government
3. government and the army encourage proxy armed groups to utilize the drug trade to generate funding for: food, clothing and equipment for conflicts with armed resistance groups

A number of experts have concluded that ceasefire groups like the United Wa State Army (UWSA), who rejected Naypyidaw's order to transform into a BGF, are producing more drugs to buy additional weapons to fight against the government if necessary.

The SHAN Drug Watch report lists other reasons for the increase in poppy cultivation:²³

Myanmar military commanders allowing People's Militia Forces (PMFs) to establish their own drug production plants and trafficking networks to wrest the market away from ceasefire groups, while at the same time blocking all income generating activities, (especially drug production and trafficking) for ceasefire groups (in particular the UWSA)

shift investment from private drug producers, both domestic and foreign (mostly Thai and Chinese), away from the Wa and their allies to areas under the control of the Myanmar Army and the People's Militia Forces (PMFs) where their drug activities and profits are more secure reported increases in poppy cultivation, heroin and methamphetamine production are greater in areas controlled by PMFs than in areas controlled by ceasefire groups

Myanmar army's Self Reliance policy imposed on proxy armed groups in border areas require them to generate their own funding, illegal fundraising activities by proxy groups are ignored or tolerated

The SHAN report states the solution "should not be the Myanmar army and ceasefire armies joining hands together against the PMFs, which will only result in financiers moving their investments to new armed groups politically in favor with Naypyidaw. The solution should be political: an agreement that ensures both the integrity of the nation and the 'autonomy in internal administration' of the non-Burman ethnic nationalities that will put an end to strife and lawlessness in the country."²⁴

Despite the worrying rise of drug production in the country, there are still encouraging signs that the government intends to address these issues. During his inauguration address, on March 30, 2011 President Thein Sein said "good governance" is regarded as one of the first requirements for the control of illicit drugs and he has been reportedly developing a 3-year project that will bring the 15-year master plan to fruition.

Human rights violations

In areas of the country where new ceasefires have been signed, the incidence of human rights abuses has reported to have declined dramatically - although this varies from state to state. Government troops are no longer targeting civilians as supporters, or protectors of armed insurgents. In Taninthayi, TBC reported that civilians are less afraid to lodge formal complaints about mismanagement by administration authorities.

However human rights violations in ethnic areas still continue. Some of these human rights violations can be categorized as the following:

1. forced labor by the Myanmar military (fortifying army camps, road repair, porter)
2. land confiscation (especially near development projects and contested areas)
3. forced relocation
4. arbitrary taxation
5. religious discrimination
6. human trafficking
7. recruitment of child soldiers
8. restrictions on freedom of movement

In spite of the new ceasefires, civilians remain fearful of being caught in conflicts between government troops and ethnic armed groups. Their movements are restricted in fields and markets in close proximity to where Myanmar army operations are being conducted. Deprivations resulting from land confiscation exacerbate the lack of food security and chronic poverty that many civilians are already facing. Although many civilians welcome the ceasefires, this has not necessarily affected their distrust towards the government or the Myanmar army - there are still widespread perceptions that the ceasefire is just a means for the government to achieve international legitimacy and commercial profit.

In conflict zones, human rights abuses that have been reported are much more severe, some of these include:

1. forced recruitment by the Myanmar army, PMF, BGF and ethnic armed groups
2. murder, rape, torture, interrogation, extortion, humiliation, religious persecution, and other inhumane acts

Negative implications: Domestic and Regional

1. threatens overall political developments and process
2. hinders healthy and rapid economic development
3. deters foreign investment
4. threatens regional security

Threatens overall political developments and process

The ongoing conflict in Kachin and northern Shan states threatens the ceasefires signed with other armed ethnic groups. It also reduces confidence in the government's sincerity in solving the nationalities problem.

The DKBA-5 has threatened to nullify its ceasefire if the government does not stop its offensive against the KIA (Jan. 4, 2013). UNFC members (including KNU, KNPP, SSA-N, CNF, NMSP and PNLO) made a statement blaming the government for causing the conflict in Kachin state and called for an immediate stop of government offensives (Jan. 1, 2013). SSPP/SSA released a statement along with the UWSA and NDAA saying that they would revise their ceasefire agreements if the conflict continues (Jan. 10, 2013).

It is likely that a breakdown of the ceasefires and resumption of conflict with other armed groups would reverse the country back to a military state. According to the 2008 Constitution, armed forces can take over the government during a state of emergency. The army still remains the most powerful institution as the National Defense and Security Council (NDSC) and army commander-in-chief seem to be above the government and president. For instance, two presidential orders issued by Thein Sein to stop offensives against the KIA in Kachin and Shan states (December, 2011 and Dec.19, 2012) were ignored by the Myanmar military.

Hinders healthy and rapid economic development

The long standing conflicts has had severe repercussions on the country's economic and political situation; before military rule in 1962 Myanmar was one of the richest countries in Asia, some say it was the richest in Southeast Asia and there were even those who claim it was the richest in Asia.²⁵

Today the government continues to spend a large proportion of the national budget on defense. In 2011, according to reports in the state-run Government Gazette in March, 2011 the military expenditure of MMK1.8 trillion (USD 2.04 billion) represents around 23.6% of total national outlay, making defense the largest single recipient of government funds. This spending is estimated to amount to 5-10% of Myanmar's GDP.²⁶

Minister of Finance and Revenue, U Hla Tun announced on Jan. 31, 2012, the military budget would decrease to 14.4% in the 2012-2013 budget, but still significantly higher than education 6.5% (increased from 3.7% in 2011) and health 3.4% (increased from 1.1% in 2011).²⁷ However in real monetary terms the total military budget actually went up by 57% after factoring in a 63% increase in the total government budget for this year. As the spending in the previous year was 7.9 trillion kyat in the previous year and 13 trillion kyat for 2012-2013, the proportion for the military budget for 2012-2013 will hence be 1.9 trillion kyat, or about US$2.3 billion according to the widely used black market floating exchange rate.

- Other funds are also available to the military through a special fund for 'defense against
- enemies inside and outside the country and safeguarding the constitution'. Furthermore,
- funding to the military can also be sourced from Myanmar's abundant offshore gas revenues and some of the many military-owned businesses.

Deters foreign investment

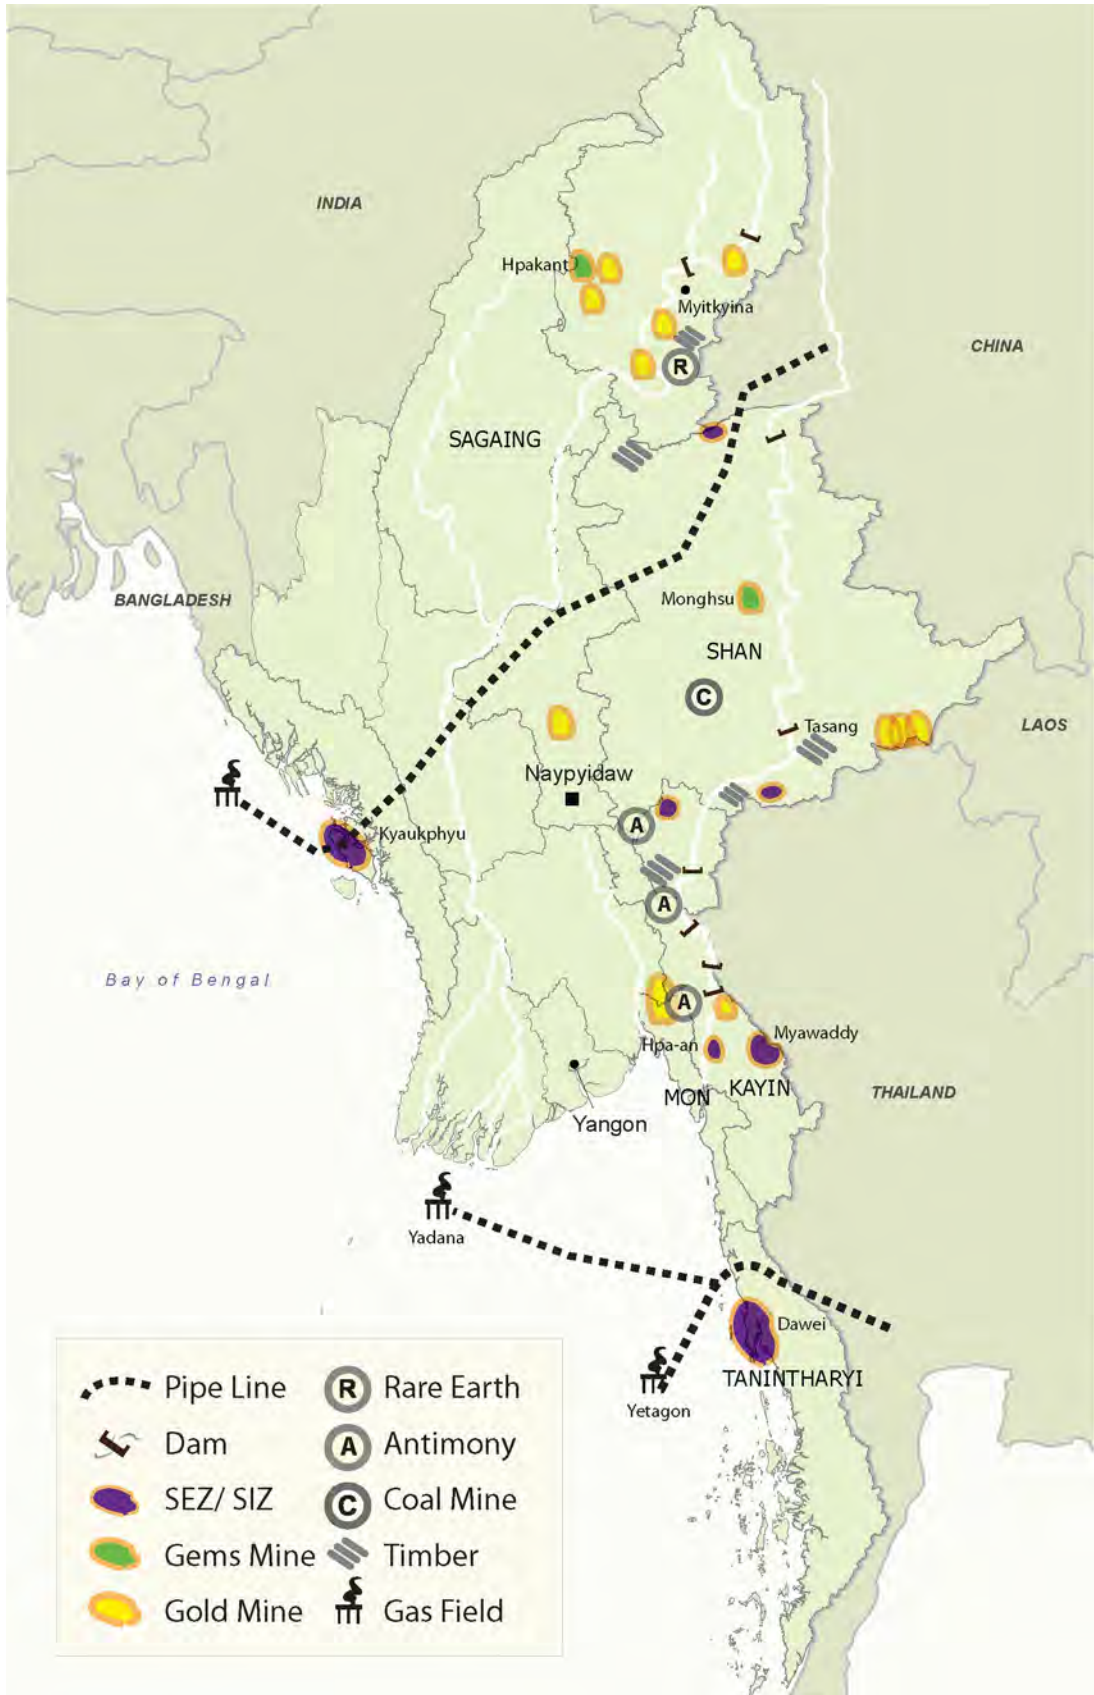

Disruption of current projects deters foreign investors from Myanmar despite the immense potential as the "last frontier" and the rich natural resources the country enjoys. Most of these natural resources are located in ethnic regions and several mega projects, such as gas pipelines, industrial zones, Dawei Mega project, have already started in these areas. At present armed conflicts and communal violence in ethnic regions are already hurting these foreign development project sites. The SSPP/SSA, KIA and TNLA have been clashing with the Myanmar army in northern Shan state where the Shwe Gas pipeline is being built. The pipeline will connect China's Yunnan province to Kyaukphyu in Rakhine state, Myanmar.

Threatens regional security

The conflict in Kachin state has caused great concern for China after 3 bombs landed in their territory following a Myanmar military air raid on KIO's Laiza headquarters on Dec. 30, 2012. Another bomb landed in China on Jan. 15, 2013. It has been reported that China has been sending troops to its border with Myanmar to boost security. The ongoing conflict is also affecting India as its own insurgents continue to launch attacks from bases inside Myanmar. In the past Thailand has also suffered from conflicts waged along its borders. The flow of refugees from across the border has been an added burden for Thai border authorities.

The religious communal violence between Muslims and Buddhists in Rakhine state has spread to other countries in the region, e.g. Buddhist temples attacked and burnt in Bangladesh, protests in Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand and India. Several radical Islamic groups have also made threats to attack Myanmar to avenge crimes against Muslims in Rakhine state: these groups include the Pakistani Taliban, Afghan Taliban and Hezbollah.

Increasing drug production and trade as a consequence of national insecurity has given rise to cross border crime for Myanmar's neighbors. Organized crime remains rampant in the Golden Triangle area between Thai-Myanmar-Sino-Laos border regions. The recent case of the drug lord Naw Kham's murder of Chinese sailors is one recent example.

II. Root Causes

Historical legacy

Myanmar officially recognizes 135 distinct ethnic groups, grouped into 8 major national ethnic races. The non-Burman population constitutes 32% of the country's total population.

The conflict in Myanmar between the diverse multi-ethnic populations is deep rooted, dating back to British colonialism. The large number of foreign nationals - namely Indian and Chinese - settling in the country, has long been the target of nationalist hatred and racism. Today Indians make up 2% of the total population, Chinese make up 3%.²⁸ Their significant presence and the immense wealth that some have accumulated has been seen as unfair dominance at the expense of locals. The racial tension and violence in Rakhine state stems from racial resentment of Rohingyas, seen by many as illegal immigrants from Bangladesh. However the issue remains controversial as some claim that they are indigenous to the northern part of Rakhine state bordering with Bangladesh.

Under the British administration, ethnic nationalities were also given favorable treatment for their compliance with the colonialists over the majority Buddhist Burman population. Many were given high ranking positions in the military, which may explain the origins of the strong military skill and power that many ethnic armed groups possess.

Civil war between some of the ethnic nationalities and Burman-led independent government broke out shortly after independence in 1948. The KNU in particular have waged one of the longest civil war in the world today. The inability of the civilian government led by U Nu in dealing with a country on the brink of collapse led to the military takeover of the government by Ne Win in 1962. The ethnic problem is hence the military's sole claim to legitimacy and entrenchment in government. This also explains why solving the ethnic problem remains key to ensuring long lasting peace and democracy in the country.

Ethnic grievances

The ethnic populations have suffered the most as a result of long-standing hostilities with the central government. They have been perceived as enemies of the state and second class citizens. The effects of a protracted war and neglect by the central government have left many ethnic areas in a dire situation. In particular, the Myanmar Army's "4 cuts policy" that was targeted against resistance groups and civilians from 1996-98, has caused severe damage to the economy in areas within, and outside, of the conflict zone.

The policy included:

1. cutting and blockading communications between rebel armed groups
2. embargo of people and consumer goods entering rebel territories

28 <https://www.cia.gov/library/publications/the-world-factbook/geos/bm.html>

3. search and destruction of core members responsible for supply, information, funds and recruits
4. embargo on trade to reduce rebel revenue

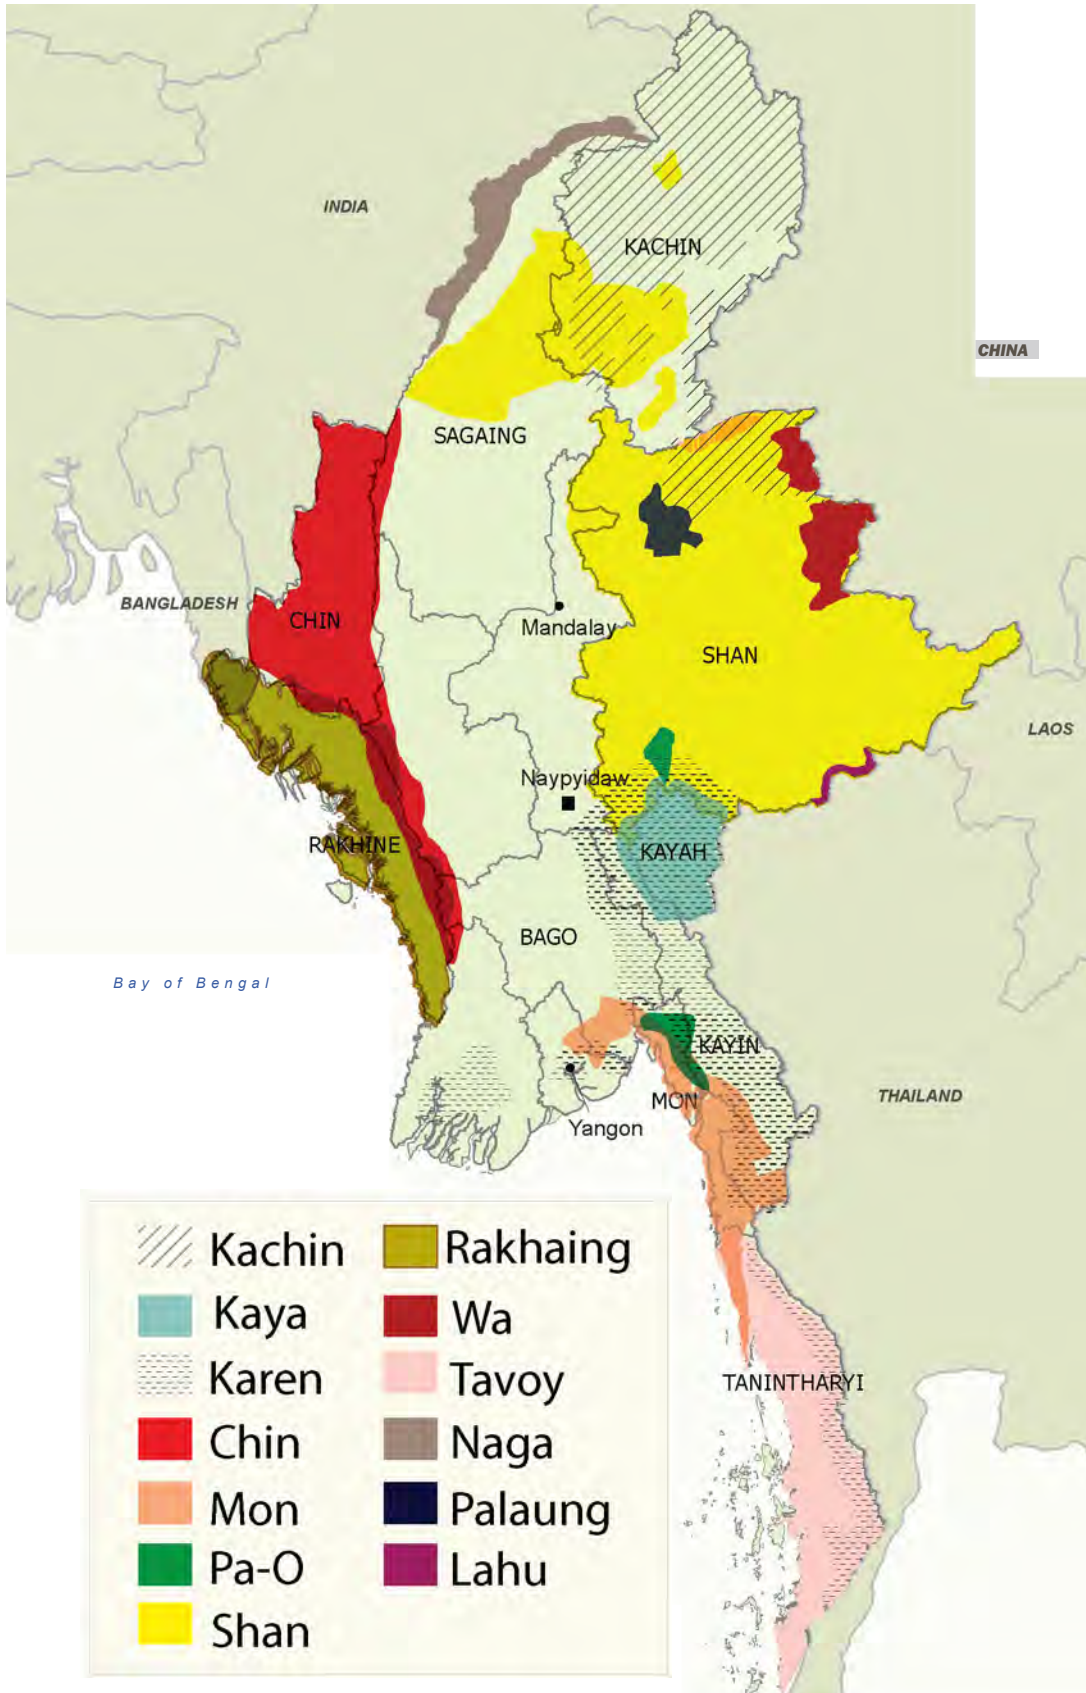

Until today, areas of the country with high ethnic density populations remain the most impoverished in the country. Lack of communication and understanding is also a major reason that deep ethnic cleavages and distrust still exist between the different nationalities and the majority Burman population.

Below is a profile of ethnic grievances:

- ethnic states found to have the highest percentage of people living in poverty: Chin state (73%), Rakhine state (44%) and Shan state (33%)²⁹
- under development in ethnic areas e.g. no electricity, proper roads and other basic infrastructure
- land confiscation and forced relocation
- unfair distribution of revenue from natural resources
- literacy levels are the lowest in ethnic states, according to 2010 statistics: Shan state (75% - eastern Shan state 52.2%), Rakhine state (75.1%), Kayah state (84.7), Kachin state (87.2%), Chin state (87.4%), Kayin state (89%)³⁰
- the incidence of drug abuse is highest among ethnic youth, especially in Kachin and Shan states - some claim that it is a deliberate strategy by the government to weaken the ethnic youth and prevent them from joining insurgencies
- lack of social and cultural rights: currently many ethnic groups do not have the right to learn, or teach, in their own language, and there is no protection for traditional cultural practices or heritage sites
- environmental and social impact of development projects:
 - land confiscation for projects
 - flooding caused by projects
 - relocation caused by projects
- inequality in regards to political rights
- higher incidences of human rights violations (forced labor, arbitrary taxation, land confiscation, racial and religious discrimination)

Economic and political stakes

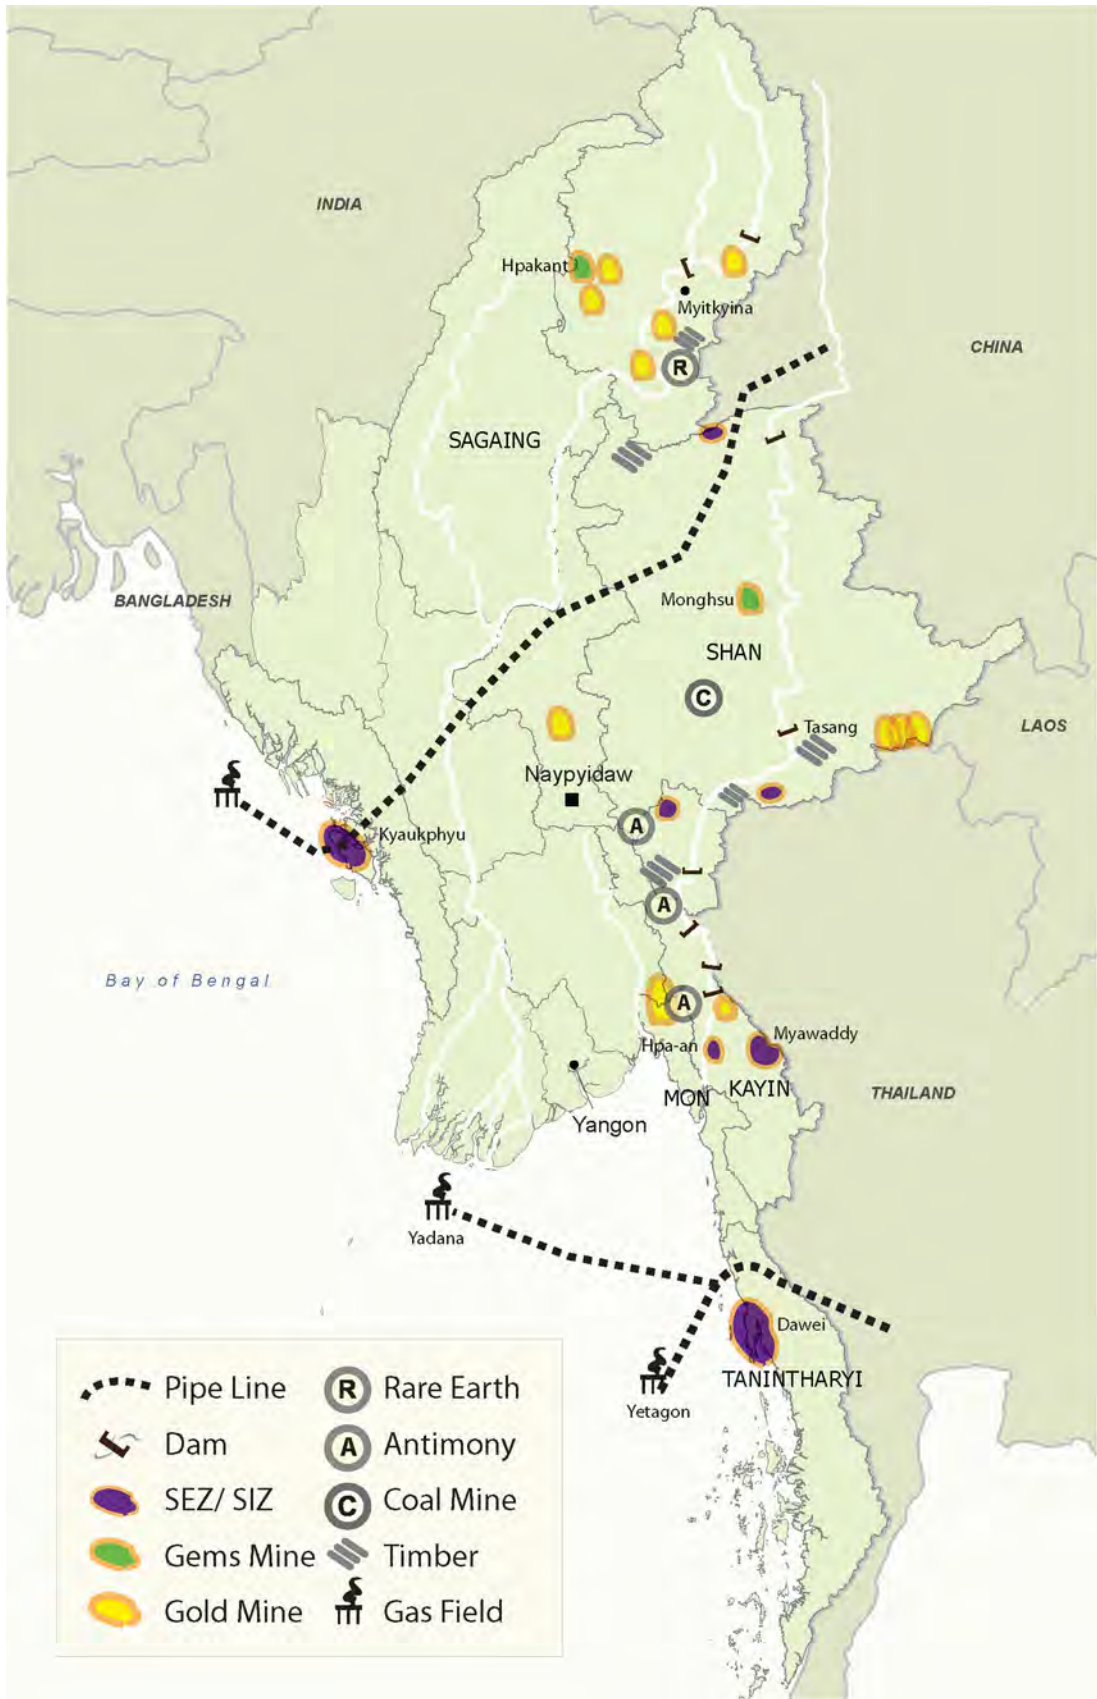

One of the most cited injustices affecting ethnic nationalities in their respective territories is unfair distribution of profits generated from natural resource extraction and large industrial projects by the central government and foreign investors. There is often little regard for the local populations who do not benefit from the wealth generated from their land, and yet have to endure the negative impacts resulting from development projects. Fair distribution of natural resource revenue has been raised as one of the main demands by several ethnic armed groups.

The government has been successful in negotiating ceasefires with ethnic armed groups by granting them some limited economic rights. This has especially been the case with groups such as the KIO in Kachin state and several others in Shan and Karenni states following the 1990 elections. After the 2010-elections, the government is once again offering economic and business incentives, both inside and outside of ceasefires, to convince armed groups to enter the legal fold.

To understand the economic topography of ethnic areas, below is a list of some major existing and proposed projects, as well as known unexploited resources.

Chin state	Tamu Economic Zone (proposed), development project (such as Tamu-kalay road) and tea leaf plantation 6 dam projects: Zalui, Tongva, Ngasitvar, Paletwa, Namhlaung Creek, Laiva, Htweehsaung and Chichaung plant (all government)
Kachin state	Logging, mining (gold, jade), agribusiness (rubber, teak, sugar cane plantation, banana plantation), rare earth reserves Hydro-electric dams such as Myitsone, Tarpain, Chibwe, Pashe, Lakin, Phizaw
Karen state	Logging (teak), mining (gold, lead), hydropower, link with Dawei Project, and rubber plantations 3 proposed Special Industrial zones: Myawaddy, Hpa-an, Phayathonzu
Karenni state	Private rubber and palm plantations, logging and mining (lead, antimony) concessions, marble factory, Loikaw industrial zone Dams: Lawpida, Beluchaung, Ywa Thit

Mon state	Cashew nut, betel nut palms, rubber and palm oil plantations, logging, Yadana and Yetagun natural gas projects Italy-Thai Development (ITD) Company's railway, oil and gas pipelines and electricity transmission tower along the Trans-Border Corridor Dawei Deep Sea Port and the Industrial Estate. There are also plans to establish two more industrial estates in Tanintharyi Region near the border at Teekee/Min The Mee Kee on ITD's trans-border corridor link, and at Maw Taung on the road to Mergui/Myeik.
Rakhine state	Shwe Oil and gas, Kyauk Phyu Economic zone, Sittwe and Kyauk Phyu deep seaports (proposed), Ponnagyun Industrial zone (proposed). Fishing and agribusiness, Kaladan River's waterway. Dams: Laymyo Chaung, Thahtay Chaung, Am Chaung, and Saidin
Shan state	Mining (gold, silver, lead, zinc, ruby, coal), logging (teak), Agribusiness (Rubber, rice), tea plantation Mong Hta industrial zone (proposed by RCSS/SSA), Namoum industrial zone (proposed by the government), Muse Trade Zone Dams: Kengtawng, Moby, Nawngpha, Paunglong, Shweli, Tasang, Yeywa, Zawgyi.

Constitutional issues

The 2008 Constitution, which came into force on January 31, 2011 shows optimistic signs of progress towards the ethnic nationalities' goal for self-determination. There are provisions for ethnic nationality rights and equality, and more importantly, it takes the form of federalism with decentralization and democratization of power.

At the same time there are important issues that have not been addressed, namely revenue sharing and division of power. Both of these are defined in general terms in the constitution without detailed implementation. In particular, how administrative functions will be divided and coordinated between central government ministries and regional governments have not been worked out in practice. In addition, the overriding power reserved for the military at all levels of government, which even supersedes that of the president, is the biggest concern for ethnic groups. The 25% seats in parliament reserved for the military also means that making any amendments will be difficult to pass without their approval. Most importantly, in a state of emergency, all provisions for human rights and democracy can be overturned. For these reasons, most active armed groups are demanding to hold political talks outside of parliament.

Constitutional provisions:

Sections in the constitution providing rights and protection for "national races"

Chapter I Basic Principles of the Union

15. For national races with suitable population, National races representatives are entitled to participate in legislature of Regions or States and Self-Administered Areas concerned.

17 (c) For national races of which representatives are so permitted to participate in legislature of Regions, States or Self-Administered Areas in accord with Section 15, such representatives are to be permitted to participate, mainly, to undertake their National races affairs.

22. The Union shall assist : (a) to develop language, literature, fine arts and culture of the National races; (b) to promote solidarity, mutual amity and respect and mutual assistance among the National races; (c) to promote socio-economic development including education, health, economy, transport and communication, so forth, of less-developed national races.

Chapter VIII Citizen, Fundamental Rights and Duties of the Citizens

354. Every citizen shall be at liberty in the exercise of the following rights, if not contrary to the laws, enacted for Union security, prevalence of law and order, community peace and tranquility or public order and morality:

- (a) to express and publish freely their convictions and opinions;
- (b) to assemble peacefully without arms and holding procession;
- (c) to form associations and organizations;
- (d) to develop their language, literature, culture they cherish, religion they profess, and customs without prejudice to the relations between one national race and another or among national races and to other faiths.

Chapter IX ELECTION

391.c The relevant national races having right to vote in accord with the provisions contained in this Constitution have also the right to vote to elect Hluttaw representatives of national races for their Region or State Hluttaw

According to the ethnic umbrella group United Nationalities League for Democracy (UNLD) Policies & 8 Basic Principles in 1990, 5 out of 8 points have been met.

1. Popular Sovereignty: The people of the Union of Burma, not a particular ethnic group or state, shall be vested with the sovereign power of the Union
2. Bicameral Legislature at Union Assembly
3. Equal Representation at Chamber of Nationalities
4. State Assembly, State Government & State Supreme Court
5. Multi-party Democracy
- *6. State Constitutions (self-determination & constitutional rights); No State Constitutions (gradual transition is needed)
- *7. Democracy, Human Rights & Gender Equality (30% reserved seats for women at all levels of National & State Assemblies) - 25% Military; No quota for women (gradual transition is needed)
- *8. Equality and Self-determination Ambiguous & No real self- determination

(From Lian H. Sakhong "The 2008 Constitution and Ethnic Issues: To What Extent Did It Satisfy the Aspirations of Various Ethnic Groups?")

Structural challenges for implementing self-governance and federal autonomy

Several challenges remain for implementing a genuine federalist system; all of the decentralized powers and structures are dominated by the government's Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP). The speakers for all of state legislatures are from the USDP, as are the chief ministers, who head the state executives (with the exception of the Chief Minister for Kayin [Karen] State, who is a military legislator).

Speakers of the State Legislatures:

State	Name	Party
Kachin state	U Rawan Jone	USDP
Kayah state	U Kyaw Swe	USDP
Kayin state	U Saw Aung Kyaw Min	USDP
Chin state	U Hauk Khin Kham	USDP
Mon state	U Kyin Pe	USDP
Rakhine state	U Htein Lin	USDP
Shan state	U Sai Lone Saing	USDP

Chief Ministers of the states:

State	Name	Party	Description
Kachin state	U La John Ngan Hsai	USDP	Kachin businessman
Kayah state	U Khin Maung Oo	USDP	Prominent Kayah individual
Kayin state	Brig-Gen Zaw Min	Military legislator	Ex-chairman, Kayin state PDC
Chin state	U Hong Ngai	USDP	Ex-chairman, Chin state PDC (retired brig-gen)
Mon state	U Ohn Myint	USDP	Ex-minister for mines (retired maj-gen)
Rakhine state	U Hla Maung Tin	USDP	Retired army colonel
Shan state	U Aung Myat	USDP	Retired Lt-col, Light Infantry Division 66

(see TNI report Burma policy briefing 6 May 2011)

Nevertheless, ethnic political parties will have some limited influence over these structures through their seats in the legislatures (some of which have sizable blocs):

#	Party	# Seats
1	SNDP - Shan Nationalities Democratic Party	58
2	RNDP - Rakhine Nationalities Development Party	35
3	AMRDP - All Mon Region Democracy Party	16
4	PSDP - Phalon-Sawaw Democratic Party	9

13	KNP - Kayan National Party	2
14	LNDDP - Lahu National Development Party	1

Membership of legislative standing committees and their ministerial positions in state governments (see table below). They include a number of areas that can have a significant impact on people's lives: land, including allocation of land and agricultural loans, local business (small business loans and some taxation), cultural promotion, and municipal issues. However, some argue that most of the power remains at the National and State level ministry representatives lack any real power.

State Ministers from Ethnic Nationality Parties:

Insufficient confidence building measures

Border Guard Force Scheme

During the run up to the 2010 elections, the previous military regime led by Gen. Than Shwe announced the BGF scheme in April 2009. This rushed attempt to absorb ethnic armed groups into the national army, required them to relinquish their autonomy without political discussions as promised in previous ceasefire agreements.

After several extensions of the deadline passed, the government announced all ceasefires "null and void" in September, 2010. The run up to and eventual breakdown in the first round of ceasefires saw the military step up pressure on ethnic armed groups.

- economically: blocked Chinese border trade through the KIO's Laiza headquarters, refused to renew the operating license of Yangon Airways run by the UWSA Chairman's son
- politically: ordered the closure of all, but two, of the KIO's liaison offices in government-controlled areas, barred Kachin State Progressive Party (KSPP) from registering and contesting in the 2010 elections, and referred to ceasefire groups as "insurgents" in the state run media
- militarily: attacked the MNDA (Kokang), capturing their headquarters (August 2009), forcing them to transform into a BGF, many other ethnic armed groups reported a military build-up near their outposts and some were even attacked - the worst being in Kachin and northern Shan states

The government adopted a less aggressive stance on August 18, 2011 when President Thein Sein pledged to make the ethnic issue a national priority, offered dialogue with all armed groups and key preconditions for talks were dropped - most notably the BGF requirement. Nevertheless the BGF scheme remains a part of the government's peace plan and listed as the last point in the Union Level Peace negotiation 8 points: "To coordinate existence of only a single armed forces in accord with the Constitution".

Many believe that the BGF scheme is a strategy by the government to control ethnic armed groups by using compliant armed groups already transformed into BGFs or PMFs to fight against them. For example: using DKBA-transformed BGF to fight against non-ceasefire Karen groups like the DKBA brigade-5 and KNU. In addition, the NDA-K transformed into a BGF and was used against the KIA. Setting up ethnic armed groups from the same area, or ethnicity, against each other has made many groups and civilians even more distrustful of the government's sincerity.

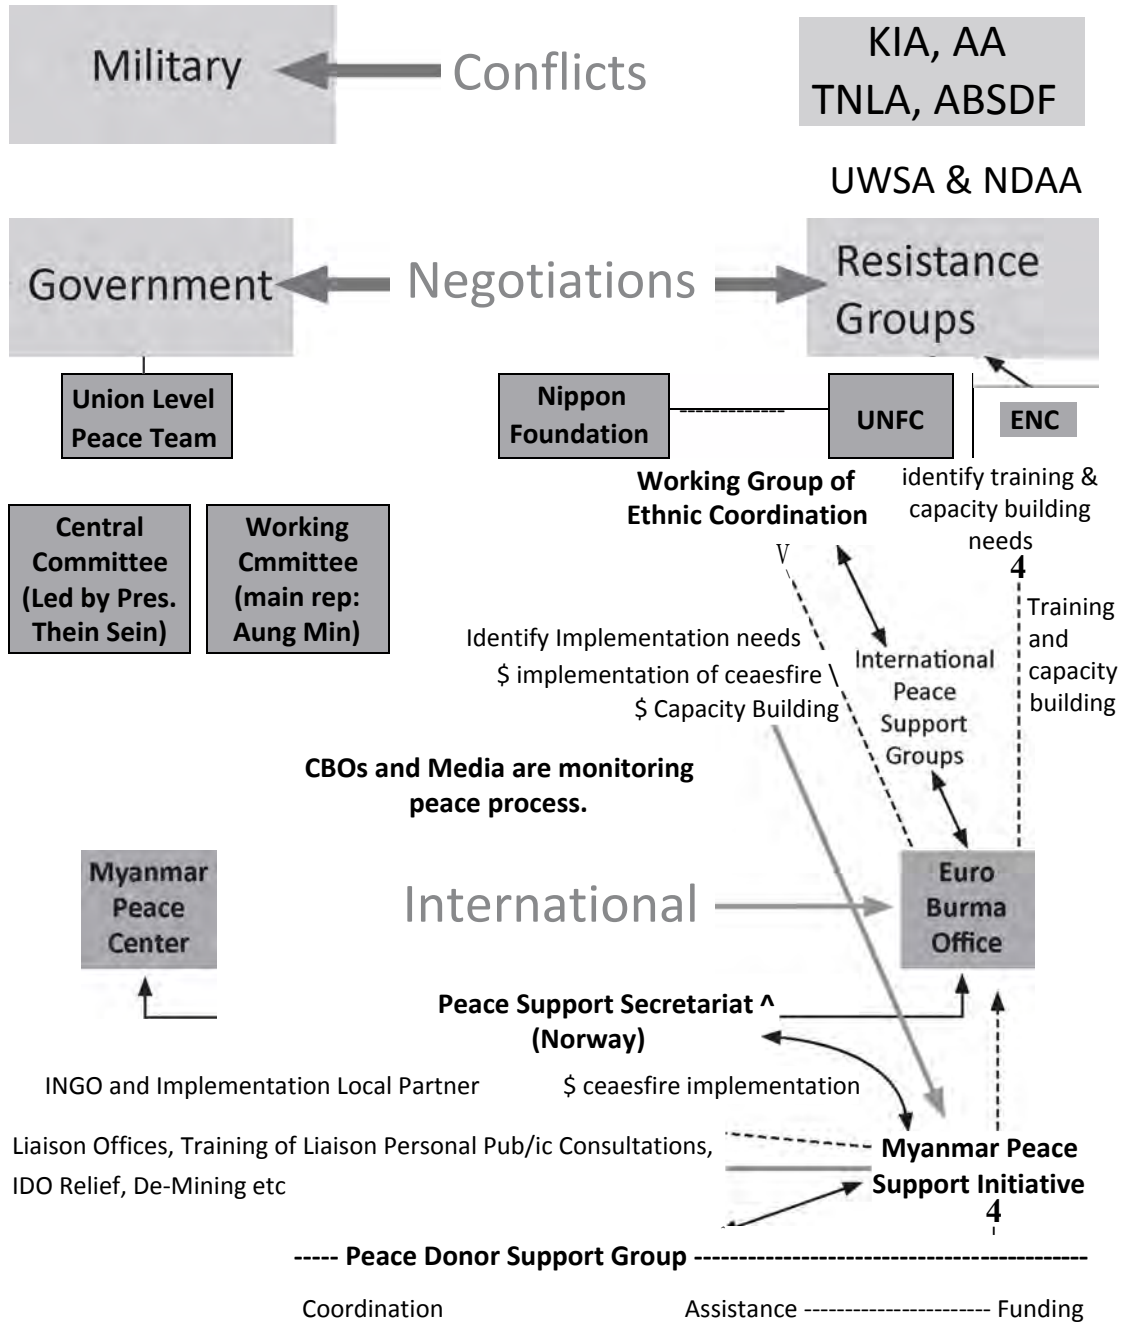

Contradictions and ongoing attacks

The military continues to launch attacks and employ counterinsurgency tactics in the ethnic borderlands. The conciliatory rhetoric of central government and government peace negotiators are proving to be insufficient in winning the confidence of ethnic nationalities.

Issue	Government perspective	Ethnic perspective
Kachin conflict	The govt requested the KIA to move their bases away from the Taping dam so they could protect their investment. They were forced to attack, when the KIA did not comply. After a Myanmar army officer and several soldiers were captured by the KIA the govt was again forced to retaliate. KIA trespassed on splinter group areas such as the former NDA-K, turned BGF, to collect taxes. The govt needed to protect the people and public facilities from destructive acts committed by the KIA.	Attacked their outpost provoking war.
No budget for peace process	It will be part of the national budget soon. They need time for improvement. The govt is still learning and righting the wrongs of the last government.	The govt is not sincere about the peace process.
Ongoing offenses	Both sides are guilty of provoking each other. Difficulty in controlling soldiers on the battlefield as emotions run high as the conflict intensifies. Ethnic leaders are not respecting ceasefire calls and other public demands for peace. Ethnic armed groups are going beyond their control areas to collect tax and recruit new soldiers to solve ongoing financial difficulties.	The govt is not sincere about their commitment for peace and does not keep its end of the bargain. They do not want to solve political issues by political means. Govt is unable to control the armed forces. Govt should be responsible and not perpetuate the conflict.

Government peace plan (official)

The government's policy towards the ethnic peace process is flexible and willing to accommodate to the changes in the country. Their approach is multifaceted, operating on the premise that the peace process is part of a much larger problem including not only military and political affairs, but also social and economic issues, to achieve broader peace dividends. Currently there is no official governmental budget allocated, apart from an endowment for peace to fund the peace team and its activities, but is said to be included soon.

The government is working to finalize all the ceasefires by the end of 2013, to hold political dialogue the following year and endorse agreements with all of the ethnic armed groups by 2015.

Three-phase peace plan

1. State level: ceasefire, allowed to open liaison offices, ethnic armed groups allowed to travel without arms, Myanmar army can travel in ethnic armed group controlled territory bearing arms but must get permission to enter
2. Union level: confidence building, holding political dialogue, implement regional development projects in education, health and communication
3. create political parties for State Parliament, Lower House (Peoples Assembly), Upper House (National Assembly)

Background

August 18, 2011: President Thein Sein pledged to make the ethnic issue a national priority. He offered dialogue with all ethnic armed groups, dropping key preconditions for talks. Specifically, he stopped requiring that all ethnic armed groups become border guard forces before talks could take place. Thein Sein even offered a national conference to seek political solutions to solve the ethnic divisions.

Union-level peace team

The latest Union-level peace team is made up of a central committee for making policies and a working committee for implementing policies associated with ceasefire negotiations. The central committee (UPCC) is chaired by President Thein Sein, while the working committee (UPWC) is chaired by the Vice President Sai Mauk Kham. Prior to the Union-level peace team, there were 2 government peace teams created by the Union-level Peace Discussion Group in December 2012. The teams were led respectively by U Aung Thuang and U Aung Min, who divided their tasks geographically. The group was renamed and reformed into the Union-level peace team by Presidential Decree No.12/2012 issued on May 3, 2012.

The Central committee has 11 members and is chaired by President Thein Sein:

1. Vice President U Nyan Tun (replaced U Tin Aung Myint Oo, Aug.16, 2012)
2. Vice President Dr. Sai Mauk Kham
3. Speaker of the Upper house U Shwe Mann
4. Speaker of the Lower house U Khin Aung Myint

5. Commander-in-Chief of the Defense Services Vice Senior-General Min Aung Hlaing
6. Minister of Home Affairs Lieutenant-General Ko Ko
7. Defense Minister Lieutenant-General Hla Min
8. Border Affairs Minister Lieutenant-General Thein Htay
9. Attorney-General Dr. Tun Shi
10. Director of President's office U Min Zaw

The UPWC consists of 52 members. It is chaired by the Vice-President Sai Mauk Kham and has three vice chairmen: President's Office Minister Aung Min, Deputy Commander-in-Chief and Commander of the Army General Soe Win, Parliamentary Member U Thein Zaw.

In addition there are 9 ministers, 10 regional or state ministers, 9 regional commanders, 18 parliament members (9 from the Upper house and 9 from the Lower house) that represent each state in the country and Director-General of the Government Office U Tin Myo Kyi.

Peacemaking Work Committee - Ceasefire guidelines

In order to reach peace agreements with ethnic armed groups, Union-level Peacemaking Work Committee will carry out the following duties and report to UPCC central executive committee:

State Level Peace negotiation - 5 Terms

1. Both sides agree to ceasefire
2. Deploy troops only in agreed territories
3. Prohibit carrying arms outside the designated territories
4. Open liaison offices in areas agreed by both sides (no arms allowed)
5. In order for the negotiation process to proceed to Union Level negotiation, each group will have to form an official delegation team and negotiate the place and time for Union level negotiation.

Union Level Peace Negotiation - 8 Points

1. Forever remain in the Union
2. Accept the Three National Causes: non-disintegration of the Union, non-disintegration of national sovereignty and perpetuation of national sovereignty
3. Cooperate in economic and development tasks

4. Cooperate in the elimination of narcotic drugs
5. Set up political parties and enter elections
6. Accept the 2008 Constitution and to make necessary amendments via Parliament by majority consent
7. Fully enter the legal fold for permanent peace and live, move, work in accord with the Constitution
8. To coordinate existence of only a single armed forces in accord with the Constitution

Myanmar Peace Center

Secretariat for the Myanmar Peace Committee and reports to the President's office

Address: No. 11, Shweli Road, Kamaryut Township, Yangon

Opened: Nov. 3, 2012

Headed by: Aung Min (President's Office Minister)

Run by: Soe Thein (President's Office Minister), Khin Ye (Home Affairs Minister)

Kyaw Yin Hlaing (Myanmar Egress), Hla Maung Shwe (Myanmar Egress), Aung Naing Oo (Vahu Development Institute), Dr. Min Zaw Oo (Academic), Kyaw Soe Naing (Myanmar Egress)

The Government of Myanmar opened the Myanmar Peace Center (MPC) in Yangon as part of an agreement with the Norway-led Peace Support Donor Group. It was established to assist the Union Peace-making Central Committee and the Union Peace-making Work Committee for the peace process. It coordinates all peace initiatives and acts as a one-stop service center for donor governments and international non-governmental organizations (INGOs) that want to support the peace process. In addition, it will serve as a platform for government officials, members of ethnic armed groups, civil society organizations, international donors and INGOs to meet and negotiate.

Vision

The Myanmar Peace Centre plays a key role in the development of a peaceful nation inclusive of Myanmar's ethnic diversity.

Mission

To contribute to sustainable peace and an overall political settlement to the benefit of all the citizens of Myanmar.

The Myanmar Peace Centre achieves its mission by providing policy advice and strategic level guidance as well as coordinates government activities in five key areas:

1. Ceasefire negotiations and implementation
2. Peace negotiations and political dialogue
3. Coordination of assistance in conflict affected areas
4. Outreach and public diplomacy
5. Mine actions

Phase 1: November 2012 - February 2013

Phase 2: March 2013 to August 2014

Phase 1: November 2012 - February 2013

Specific Objective 1	Effective monitoring and implementation of ceasefire agreements is ensured.
Specific Objective 2	Consult with wide range of stakeholders to develop a plan for political dialogue.
Specific Objective 3	Peace building activities build confidence in the ceasefire agreements and in the longer term political process.
Specific Objective 4	Build widespread public understanding of the peace process.
Myanmar Mine Action Centre (MMAC) is designed to complement efforts to achieve the specific objectives, as a specialized project for humanitarian demining under the peace process.

The MPC was originally reported to have opened in July, 2012 on U Wisara Road. It was actually opened on Nov.3, 2012 with a start-up fund of EUR 700,000 from the European Union (a member of the PSDG) and four houses provided by the Myanmar government. The opening ceremony was attended by the European Commission (EC) President Barroso.

The centre has been actively organizing seminars and workshops on confidence-building and peacemaking. However the MPC is officially scheduled to open in March, 2013. At that time more information about its structure and activities will be publicized.

Progress of post-election ceasefire groups:

The information below shows the progress made for the government's ceasefire guidelines for the state and union level peace. In addition to the government's guidelines, the ethnic armed groups have also called for amnesty. These can be found in the comprehensive chart of agreed and demanded points made within and outside the peace talks.

See the Ceasefire Terms Chart in Appedix (1).

Official delegation team for union level negotiations

Currently only 6 out of the 13 post-election ceasefire groups have an official delegation team. These include: CNF, KNU, KPC, NMSP, PNLO, RCSS/SSA

Seven ceasefire groups have not established an official delegation team for peace negotiations with the government. These include: UWSA, NDAA, SSPP/SSA, ALP, NSCN-K, DKBA-5 and KNPP

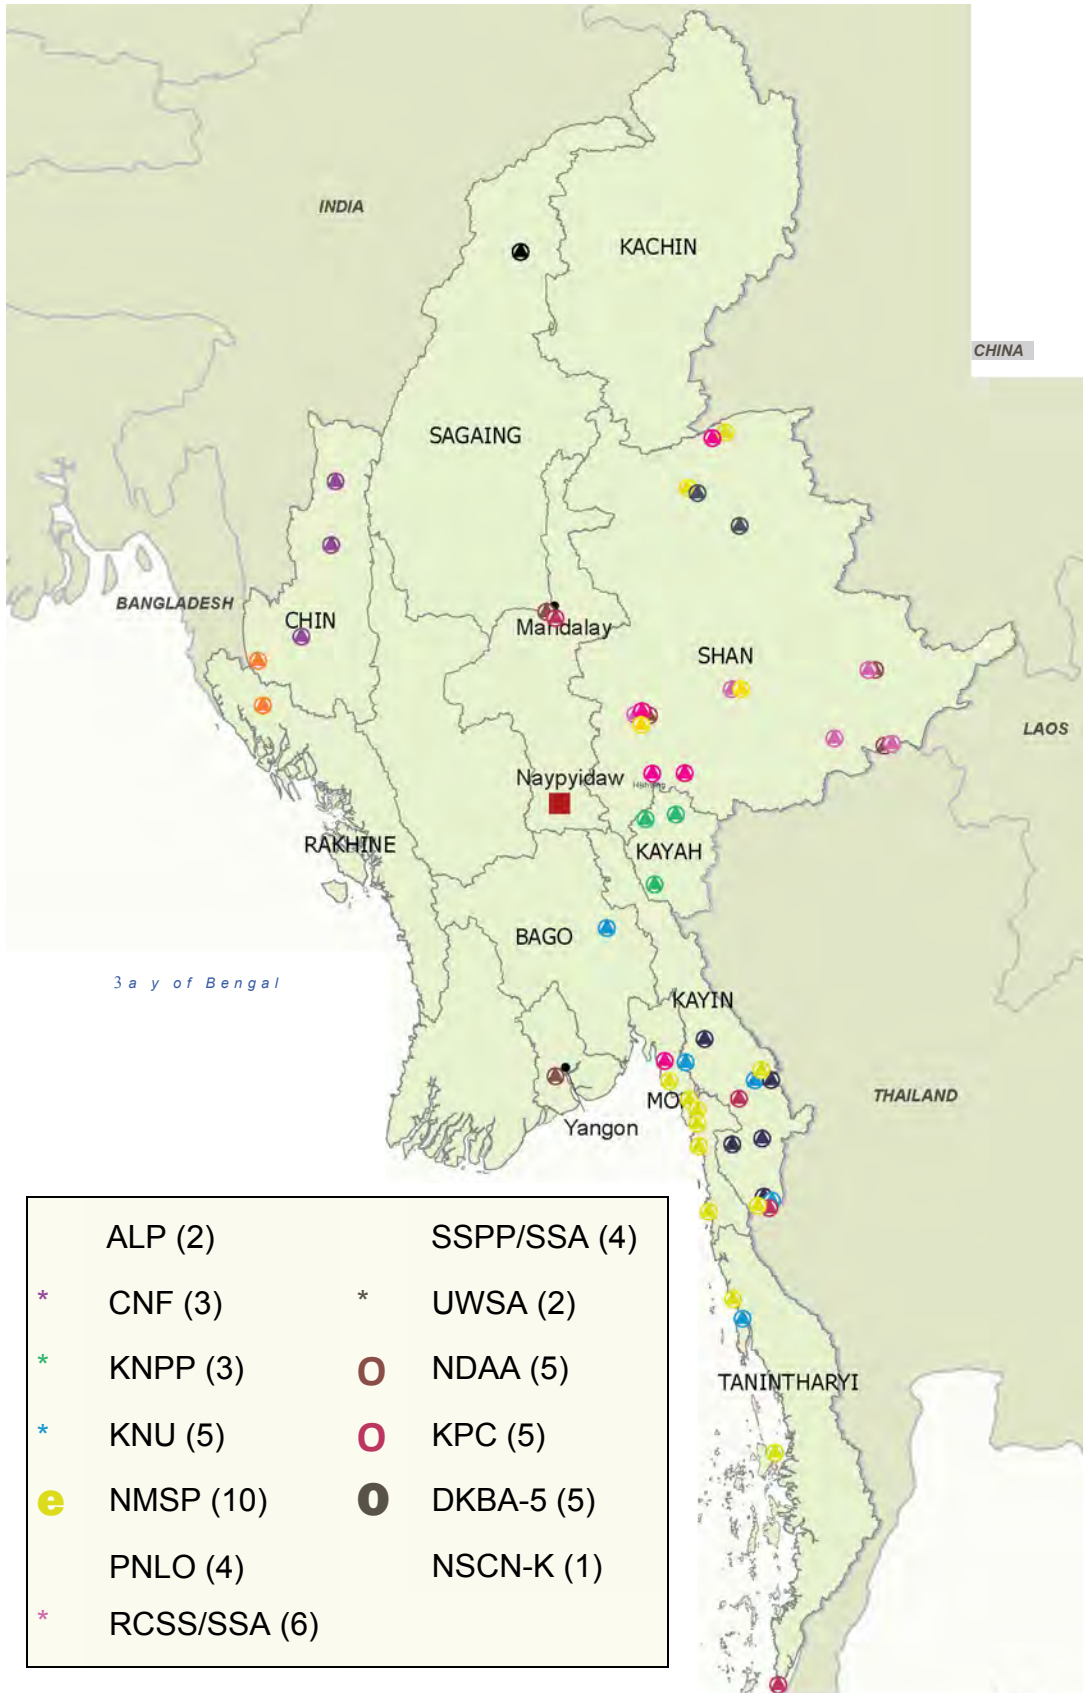

The 2008 constitution

None of the new ceasefire groups accept the 2008 for reasons explained above. However they accept the first 4 points: to remain forever in the Union, accept the Three National Causes: non-disintegration of the Union, non-disintegration of national sovereignty and perpetuation of national sovereignty, cooperate in economic and development tasks and eliminate narcotic drugs. The ceasefire groups do not accept points 5-8 of the Union level peace negotiation: accepting the 2008 constitution, setting up a political party to enter elections, make amendments via parliament, work towards a single armed forces (transform into a BGF). This is perhaps the biggest hindrance to the current peace process.

Economic and development cooperation

Several parties have made major considerable headway in establishing economic and development partnerships with the government. However the KNU and NMSP have made few demands from the government so far.

CNF	Agreed: to set up a Special Economic Zone, establish an organizing committee to seek funding, allow tourists to freely travel in and out of Chin state, promote IT skills, develop a national highway, construct at least one airport
DKBA-5	Development commitment
KNPP	Cooperate with INGOs and NGOs on development issues, in communication with the Kayah state government demanding: electricity in the whole of Kayah state.
KPC	Demanding: border trade, regional infrastructure, exploration, trading (timber), tourism and mineral extraction
NDAA	Agreed: INGOs can assist with development, commitment to develop tourism, education and health. cooperate to improve transportation mining and electricity. Demanding: access to mining, coal, gold exploration and production, allow outside investors, researchers to assess natural resources, allow trading of 10,000 tons of teak wood and 10,000 tons of other hardwoods, control of border checkpoints and taxation, supply rice, fuel oil and money

NMSP	Work for the stability and development of education, health and social sectors
PNLO	Coordinate with the government on agricultural projects
RCSS/SSA	Agreed to set up a special industrial zone run by the RCSS/SSA outside the ceasefire agreement: created the Shan Taungdan Cherry company

Anti-drugs cooperation

The following groups have agreed to cooperate on the government's plan to curb narcotics in accordance with the Government's Order No. 17/2011:

CNF, DKBA-5, KNPP, NDAA, PNLO, SSPP/SSA, RCSS/SSA

In particular, RCSS/SSA signed a tripartite agreement between the government and UNODC to combat drug production and trade in the region. The RCSS anti-narcotics division also has an official website that covers their activities and programs. <http://www.rcssantinarcotic.org/rcssanc.org/>

Setting up political parties

None of the post-elections ceasefire groups have set up political parties for upcoming elections.

During the 2010 elections, KIO's former Vice-president No. 2 Dr. Manam Tu Ja set up a political party called the Kachin State Progressive Party (KSPP), which included the NDA-K and Myitkyina-based Kachin Nationals Consultative Assembly (KNCA) - an umbrella organization for all the national Kachin politicians. However the election commission rejected their registration due to their close connections with the KIO. 14 KSPP leading members, including Dr. Tu Ja, tried to run as individuals but were rejected again by the election commission.

The political parties formed by former ceasefire groups that contested in the 2010 elections include:

- DKBA + Karen Peace Force ^ Kayin State Democracy and Development Party (KSDDP): 2 elected MPs U Mahn Aung Tin Myint (National Assembly) and U Chit Hlaing (State and Regional Assembly, Myawaddy (1) Kayin State)
- Pa-O National Organization (PNO): 8 elected MPs U Nay Win Tun (National Assembly), U Khun Maung Thaug, (Pinlaung), U Win Ko (Hsihseng), U Khun Thein Pe (Hopong) (People's Assembly), U Khun Aye Maung (Hopong (1)), U Khun Hla Thein, (Hsihseng (1)),

U Khun Maung Wei (Hsihseng (2)), U Khun Hla Hsan (Pinlaung (1)) State and regional assembly

- PSLF ^ Ta'ang (Palaung) National Party (TNP): 2 elected MPs U Tun Kyaw (National Assembly) and U Aik Mone (People's Assembly, Mantung, Shan State)
- KNU Peace Group ^ USDP candidate: Leader U Padoh Aung Hsan (State & Regional Assembly, Papun(2) Kayin State)

BGF and PMF plan

The government's order to all ethnic armed groups to transform into BGF and PMF is the biggest obstacle facing the peace process. All of the post-election ceasefire groups have rejected the order that would require them to fall under the control of the Myanmar military. The UNFC proposed creating a Federal Union Army (FUA) that was formed in December 2011 and is led by Gen. Bee Htoo (KNPP).

There is not an official governmental document that defines their BGF policy. The people's militia force is mentioned in the Defense Services, Chapter 7, of the 2008 constitution. However, the wording is vague and no details about the role of the people's militia are provided.

340. With the approval of the National Defence and Security Council, the Defence Services has the authority to administer the participation of the entire people in the Security and Defence of the Union. The strategy of the people's militia shall be carried out under the leadership of the Defence Services.

According to a report by the Network for Democracy and Development called "Civil and Military Administrative Echelon in Burma" (August 2011), the structure and organization of the Border Guard Force and People Military Group are detailed below:

Border Guard Force (BGF) is a regular military force and has a military structure like the Myanmar army. Although the battalion commander is from the ethnic armed group, the Myanmar army is in total control over the activities of the BGF and work together during military operations.

The BGF has a total of 326 personnel of which 3% are Myanmar army soldiers, including commanding officers and other rank officers. Among them, 30 soldiers from the Myanmar army including officers work together with ethnic soldiers in the battalion and take important administrative positions in the BGF.

BGF battalion commanders can promote their soldiers and are allowed to use heavy weapons like motors provided by the Myanmar army. However a BGF battalion is only allowed to patrol in their active area while a Myanmar army battalion can be deployed freely in any area. For instance, a Myanmar army battalion under LID 88 in Magwe region can be deployed in Kachin state, while a Karen BGF cannot be deployed in Kachin state.

People Military Force (PMF), also formerly known as an anti-insurgent group is not a regular force like the Myanmar army and the BGF. It does not have a military structure or any Myanmar army soldiers. There is no official ranking system in the PMF. Nor does it have a determined number of soldiers like the BGF. For instance: each BGF battalion has 326 soldiers, but a PMF battalion may have less than 100. PMF soldiers are not required to attend military training provided by the Myanmar army, and salaries are not provided. But its activities are monitored by the Myanmar army. The PMF is also not obligated to engage in military affairs or operations fulltime, unlike the BGF and Myanmar army. Essentially, the PMF's main purpose is to assist the Myanmar army when required. This includes: collecting intelligence and guiding troops to ethnic armed groups' headquarters or camps.

PMF leaders are permitted to run their own businesses to finance military operations within its active areas. They are not allowed to patrol outside their designated areas or use heavy weapons.

So far, some of the ethnic armed groups that have transformed into a BGF or PMF include: NDA-K, KNPLF, MNDAA, Lahu Militia group, DKBA, KDA, battalions from SSA-N and SSA-S as well as other splinter groups from large ethnic armed groups. See below for a full list of BGF and PMFs.

Border Guard Force *Each battalion of the Border Guard Forces (BGF) has 326 soldiers; this includes 18 officers and 3 commanders (one from the Myanmar military also known as Tatmadaw). BGFs are only deployed within their designated territories. Their same salaries are the same as Myanmar army soldiers.

Ethnic peace plan

All the ethnic armed groups believe that only negotiations that follow the Panglong Agreement (self-determination, federalism, ethnic equality) will resolve the ethnic conflicts. Currently there is neither a cohesive plan nor a body to represent all the ethnic armed groups and their various demands.

Several of the ethnic armed groups' main demands (excluding the government's guiding principles that were previously mentioned) are:

1. Amnesty/legalization of ethnic groups
2. International mediators, monitoring bodies, public consultation
3. Panglong terms and pan-ethnic dialogue
4. Cultural protection
5. Human rights and a special commission to ensure these rights are protected
6. Environmental protection
7. Resettlement/integration of refugees and soldiers

Presently the United Nationalities Federal Council (UNFC) is the most active ethnic alliance. However it does not represent all of the ethnic armed groups. Several of its members are involved in the Working Group on Ethnic Coordination (WGEC), which is administered and financed by the Brussels-based Euro-Burma Office (EBO). The EBO is the main organization responsible for liaising and coordinating with the MPSI.

Both the UNFC and WGEC have called for alternatives to the government's BGF scheme. The government claims that all changes are possible through existing political platforms defined by the 2008 Constitution e.g. ethnic political parties that can contest elections and parliament.

UNFC

The UNFC is the latest coalition of ethnic armed groups. The UNFC is a transformation of the former Committee for the Emergence of Federal Union (CEFU) founded in November 2010. Currently, the UNFC are advocating for talks with the government as a united ethnic front. Their demands during negotiations with the government are based on the second draft of the 2008 Federal Constitution.

Recently, the KIO claimed that they would only hold peace talks with the government through the UNFC, but on Feb. 4, 2013, only days after issuing the statement they independently met with the government's UPWC in Ruili, China.

Objectives:

UNFC's objectives: establish a Federal Union (in Myanmar), form a Federal Union Army (FUA), protect ethnic areas.

Membership: 11: (originally 12 members * Kachin National Organization (KNO) merged with the KIA)

UNFC members (who were also in CEFU)	New UNFC members
1. Chin National Front (CNF)	1. Lahu Democratic Union (LDU)
2. Kachin Independence Organization (KIO)	2. National United Party of Arakan (NUPA) / Arakan National Council (ANC) - which includes the Arakan Liberation Party (ALP)
3. Karen National Union (KNU)	3. Pa-O National Liberation Organization (PNLO)
4. Karenni National Progressive Party (KNPP)	4. Palaung State Liberation Front (PSLF) / Ta-ang National Liberation Army (TNLA)
5. New Mon State Party (NMSP)	5. Wa National Organization (WNO)
6. Shan State Progress Party (SSPP/SSA)	6. KNO - merged with KIO*

Organizational structure:

Each member group appoints 2-4 individuals to act as representatives in the UNFC. Presently, there are 22 members that make up the UNFC Council, 10 have been elected to serve in the central executive committee.

Federal Union Army: formed in December 2011, Commander in Chief Gen. Bee Htoo (from KNPP)

UNFC Six Point Plan:

1. Meeting of armed and civil society organizations to lay down points to be included in the Framework for Political Dialogue
2. Meeting between the Union government and the armed movements' representatives to establish the Framework for Political Dialogue
3. Conferences of the ethnic people in state and regions
4. A national conference of the ethnic nationalities
5. A Union conference held in the Panglong Spirit and participated by equal number of representatives from the ethnic forces, democratic forces and the government, to discuss and sign the Union Accord
6. A precise timeframe for the peace process

UNFC's objection to govt peace plan:

Points 5-8 — "are measures to control our armed ethnic resistance organizations and mould them into an entity as desired by the government, before any political settlement is achieved."

UNFC Demands:

UNFC has requested discussion on five main issues with the government

1. Planning a meeting between UNFC and the government in Japan under the moderation of The Nippon Foundation [rejected by the government, should not be done in a third country - too far and expensive, should be inside the country at the MPC]
2. How to solve the ongoing sectarian violence in Rakhine state
3. The implementation of UNFC's Six Point Ethnic Peace Roadmap
4. Ending the fighting between the KIO and government troops
5. Legalize armed groups - currently those that have signed new ceasefire agreements are still illegal organizations, although they are allowed to operate within government-controlled cities and towns [new demand]

Informal agreement: (Nov.9, 2012)

1. Resolve political issues by political means
2. Government should hold political dialogue with armed groups collectively and not separately
3. Discuss the following topics during the upcoming formal meeting in the Myanmar Peace Center (MPC) in Yangon: framework for political dialogue, "talking points" or agenda, timeline, technical assistance and logistics

See the Comparison Chart in Appedix (2).

Euro Burma Office & the Working Group on Ethnic Coordination

Euro Burma Office

Director: Harn Yawngghwe

The EBO has played a pivotal role in brokering peace talks between many of the ethnic armed groups and government. The organization convened a meeting of with ethnic groups involved in ceasefire negotiations with the government and hosted the monthly "Ethnic Coordination" meetings prior to the formation of the Working Group on Ethnic Coordination (WGEC) in June 2012. The WGEC is both logistically and administratively supported by the EBO. Several of the WGEC members overlap with the UNFC and Ethnic Nationalities Council (ENC).

Working Group for Ethnic Coordination

The WGEC aims to coordinate ongoing ceasefire negotiations and develop a common peace plan. Activities funded by the MPSI are primarily training and capacity building that are provided by INGOs of the International Peace Support Group (IPSG). The EBO is currently the conduit for funds from the Myanmar Peace Support Initiative to the WGEC.

The WGEC was conceived at a conference attended by ethnic armed groups that took place from Feb. 26-28, 2012; 6 months after President Thein Sein issued a formal invitation for peace talks. Leaders of 17 armed groups were gathered at the meeting, 9 of which had already made positive responses to the President's call. These included 11 UNFC members and 6 UNFC observer groups RCSS/SSA, DKBA-5, KPC, non-BGF faction of the MNDAA (Peng Daxun, son of ousted leader Peng Jiasheng), KNLP and KNPLF (BGF).

The WGEC was created in June, 2012 and initially made up of representatives from ethnic armed groups and advisors from 7 states. Following the Ethnic Nationalities Conference in September, civil society organizations representatives (2 representatives each from youth, women and issue-based CBOs) were added. The WGEC meets once a month to work out a framework for upcoming political dialogue this includes: agenda, composition, mandate, structure, transitional arrangement and core principles, among others.

Agreement on the following terms:

1. the biggest challenge is to amend the 2008 constitution
2. trying to amend it within Parliament is out of the question
3. the basis for negotiations must be the 1947 Panglong Agreement through which the Union came into existence
4. there needs be a common set of principles and plan for all the groups involved
5. popular participation and cooperation with democratic forces are necessary to achieve working solutions

Two resolutions:

1. 3 -stage peace plan (ceasefire, implementation of agreements, and political dialogue)
2. form a working group to develop common principles and plans for the peace process

WGEC MEMBERS

Resource Persons	CSOs	Ethnic States Representatives

Nai Hong Sar (Mon) 5. Khu Oo Reh (Kayah) 6. Dr. Sui Kha aka Dr. Shwe Khar (Chin) 7. Solomon (Shan) 8. Col. Perng Fa

All of WGEC's membership apart from advisers is derived from resistance and activist organizations. They do not receive salaries for their work and representatives from each group take turns in facilitating the monthly meetings. There are no permanent WGEC offices.

WGEC draft framework for political dialogue is waiting for comments and suggestions from each armed group before being proposed at the next meeting with the Union Peacemaking Work Committee (UPWC).

Non-UNFC ceasefire groups

UWSA, NDAA-ESS, RCSS/SSA, DKBA-5, KPC, AA, ABSDF and NSCN-K are not members of the UNFC, but generally follow the same guiding principles: ethnic rights and federalism. RCSS/SSA, DKBA-5, KPC along with the KNLP, KNPLF and non-BGF faction of the MNDAA are observers of the UNFC. However an important issue raised by individual ethnic armed groups about the UNFC is that it works too slowly and is not as effective in achieving its goals as they would like.

UWSA, NDAA, RCSS/SSA did not join the UNFC as official members, which they see as too Western oriented. The three groups have good relations with each other and maintain regular contact.

UWSA already has a self-administered zone as stipulated by the 2008 Constitution, which consists of 6 townships in Shan state: Hopang, Mongmao, Pangwaing (Pangwai), Namphan (Nahpan), Metman (Markmang) and Panghsang (Pangkham). Its official name was announced by decree on 20 August 2010. The division is set to be self-administered by the Wa people, but is administered by the UWSA aka the official Wa Special Region 2 of Shan state.

DKBA-5 and KPC maintain close relationships with their former mother organization KNU and generally follow its leadership.³¹ However, they have not joined the UNFC because they do not agree with all their principles and prefer to negotiate with the government on their own terms.

ABSDF and AA are also unofficially following UNFC policy.

Background:

The Myanmar Peace Support Initiative is a Norwegian-led international initiative to support the ceasefires in Myanmar by providing humanitarian and development assistance. In parallel with the continued political efforts, it provides communities in the ceasefire areas with the necessary assistance to recover from conflict and build the momentum for implementing peace on the ground.

Norway is not involved in the ceasefire-negotiations, or peace-negotiations. The initiative does not replace the process towards a broad political settlement with all the ethnic groups. It is instead positioned as a relatively short-term effort to support the ongoing ceasefire negotiation process. The provision of peace dividends will in turn help in building confidence and establishing a favorable environment for the separate political processes.

The Role of Norway in the MPSI

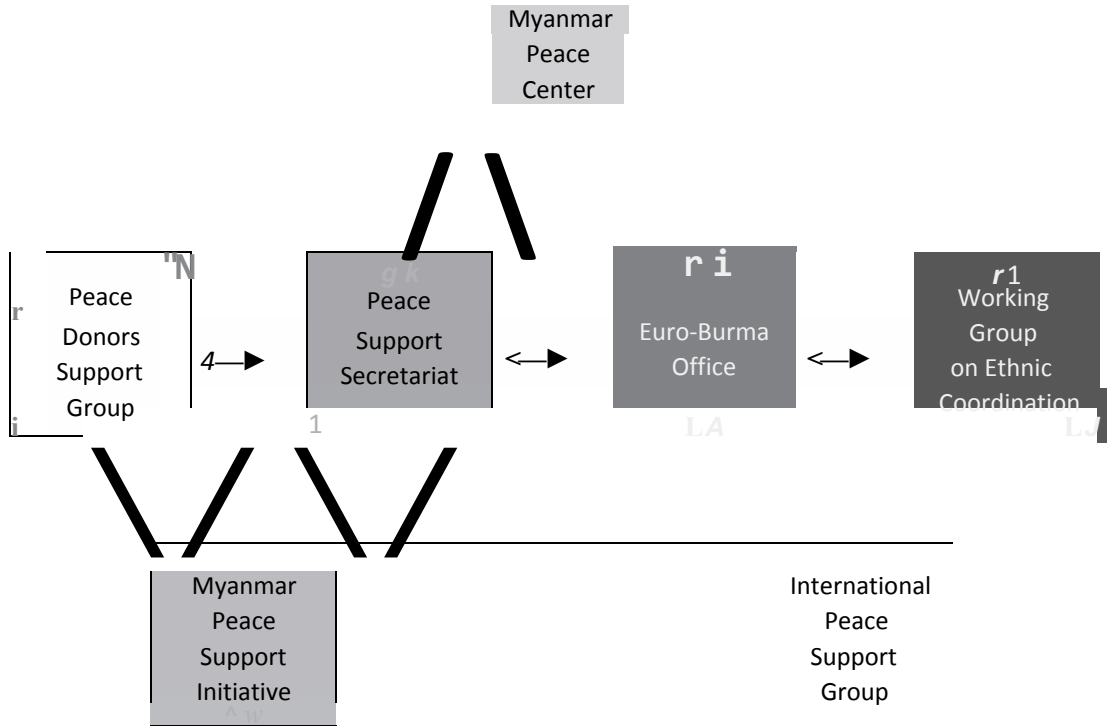

The Myanmar government has asked the Norwegian government to help facilitate and coordinate the delivery of assistance to the conflict-affected communities in the ceasefire areas where there has been minimal, or no prior access provided for aid-delivery.

The Norwegian government has also been asked to initiate a consultation process with a wide range of stakeholders, these include: potential donors, the government, non-state armed and political groups, civil society actors and communities in order to gather funds collected from various donor countries for the delivery of aid in these areas.

Main objectives:

- To build confidence in the ceasefire agreements amongst communities, armed groups and the Myanmar government/army
- To increase the space for aid activities in the former conflict-affected areas
- To contribute to positive interaction between the various actors on the ground
- To support increased capacity of local communities, civil society, and government authorities

Coordination Mechanism (as of July 3, 2012)

The MPSI works to assist both the government and ethnic armed groups in the peace process. It supports the government's peace plan through assistance for ceasefire implementation, and supports ethnic armed groups through training and capacity building. The Euro-Burma office is the MPSI's key liaison with ethnic armed groups that make up the Working Group for Ethnic Coordination (WGEC). Meanwhile, the International Peace Support Group (IPSG) made up of INGOs involved in capacity building initiatives, supports the ethnic armed groups to negotiate a just and equitable peace.

Projects (as of June 20, 2012)

1. Pilot project - Kyauk Kyi: 2010 - present (humanitarian assistance)

KNU ceasefire

To support the transition from active conflict to ceasefire, a US$5M pilot project in Kyaukkyi township, Bago Region, has been initiated to focus primarily on resettling an estimated 1.5 million Karen internally displaced people (IDPs), establishing liaison offices, providing farming equipment and food, and clearing land mines. In this case, the focus of interventions is to build confidence among all involved in the process, including helping civilian populations feel that peace is possible, but without changing pre-existing power relationships that could distract from the ongoing political dialogues. The approach taken is through the launching of pilot projects. This pilot project is being implemented in the KNU-controlled eastern part of the state and based on a needs assessment undertaken by the KNU-affiliated IDPs assistance group CIDKP (Committee of Internally Displaced Karen People), and an initial non-technical survey of landmines in the target area by the NPA (Norwegian People's Aid).

— in October 2012 there were rumors that the MPSI was going to suspend their projects in Karen state until the KNU resolved internal divisions. However, the Norwegian Foreign Ministry Spokesperson Kjetil Elsebutangen confirmed that they would continue their projects but not initiate any new activities in KNU controlled areas during that time.³²

2. Support joint government and armed group activities (strengthening peace dialogue)

e.g. CNF ceasefire

The MPSI is being asked to facilitate a joint Government-CNF assessment of needs, as well as cooperation with traditional mediators (mostly religious leaders) to establish a local ceasefire monitoring network

3. Support the rehabilitation of infrastructure and services (development assistance)

e.g. The NMSP ceasefire broke down in 2010 (signed in 1995). Although there wasn't an outbreak of renewed armed conflict because the area was underdeveloped the situation created mass instability for the civilian population resulting in human rights violations instigated by the Myanmar army.

³² <http://www.irrawaddy.org/archives/16264>

This project aims to create confidence in the peace process through support to the rehabilitation of infrastructure and services (peace dividends). In terms of services, a key need is support for education, which in turn raises the issue of national identity and the place of ethnic languages in schools. A community-owned needs assessment was planned in Mon state for June.

Upcoming projects:

- A second pilot is being discussed with the KNU.
- In Chin state, it is expected that a joint Government-CNF assessment will identify key infrastructure rehabilitation needs (such as roads and markets) to bring remote areas out of their geographic and economic isolation.
- The NMSP is in the final stages of preparing a request of support for education. It is likely that a community-based pilot project will also be implemented in Mon state.
- Support to the RCSS/SSA peace process is likely to consist of a community-based needs assessment, and related agriculture and livelihood projects. Supporting opium substitution and alternative livelihoods projects have also been discussed.

Controversies

The initiative has proved controversial with Thailand-based organizations, particularly given the Norwegian government's decision to cut funding to border-based NGOs in early 2012. In an attempt to allay some of these concerns, Mr. Larsen visited Chiang Mai on May 30, 2012 to discuss the initiative with some of the organizations.

Issues raised:

- Lack of transparency of a process they say has systematically excluded them
- Suspicions over Norway's economic motives and its "neo-liberal agenda"
- Fear it could coerce rebels into joining the government under the 2008 constitution
- Doubts over the speed of the project
- Concerns that it risks derailing, rather than consolidating the fragile peace processes in Myanmar's ethnic regions because the initiative prioritizes economic development ahead of political dialogue, it conceptualizes aid as a strategic tool to simultaneously "test and build confidence" in the nascent peace processes though ostensibly without supplanting political resolution

Karen Community Based Organizations issued a statement that claims the fund lacks transparency and community support. It called on the MPSI to:

1. Stop their current activities for long enough to review their process and procedures for implementation
2. Immediately release the fund design documents including the local languages translations, these documents should include sector targets, criteria and plans
3. Issue clear rationales for how each of the projects supported by the funds will contribute to conflict resolution
4. Develop and release project risk analysis and mitigation, and ensure that accessible monitoring and accountability mechanisms are in place
5. Develop and execute a robust consultation strategy both with local community members and with community-based organizations

Aug. 20, 2012: Five organizations concerned with the Karen peace process in Myanmar say they will not attend a meeting organized by Norway's MPSI because of its "flawed, nontransparent peace-fund consultation" process. They sent an open letter to Norwegian Ambassador Katja Nordgaard outlining their concerns.

The 5 Karen organizations:

1. Karen Women Organization (KWO)
2. Karen Environmental Social Action Network (KESAN)
3. Burma Partnership (BP)
4. Human Rights Education Institute of Burma (HREIB)
5. Women's League of Burma (WLB)

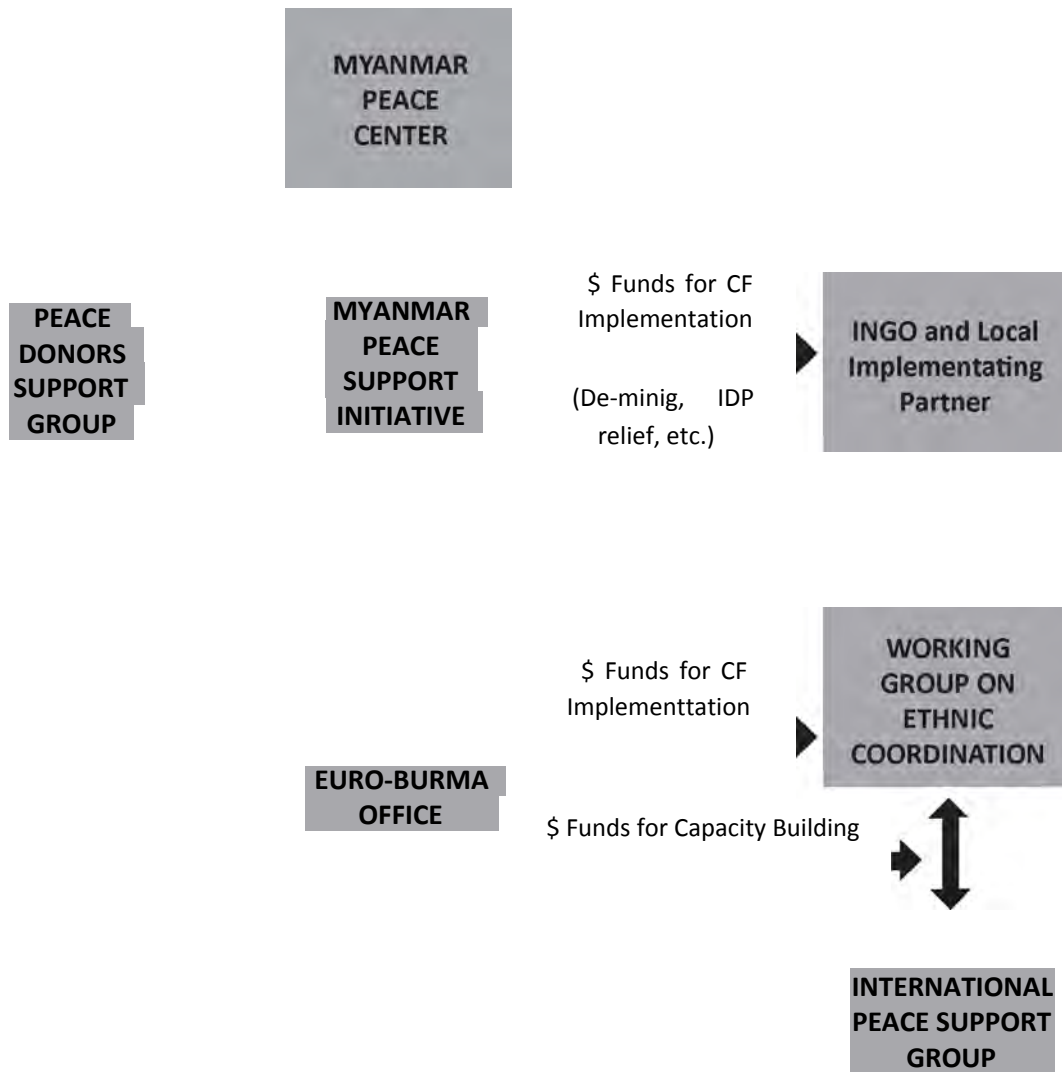

Peace Donor Support Group (PDSG)

Formed: June 12, 2012

The group is part of the overall Myanmar Peace Support Initiative (MPSI) to provide a coordinated donor approach towards the Myanmar government. The group is led by Norway and initially includes Australia, the United Kingdom, the European Union, the United Nations and the World Bank. More countries are expected to join. A total of nearly US $500M to support peace-building and other projects was announced on June 12, 2012.

Official press release (Burmese): <http://www.president-office.gov.mm/briefing-room/daily-news/news697>

#	Country/Organization	Description	Amount
1	United Nations	initial contribution	US$5M
2	Australia	Myanmar's health care services and dispatch technicians for clearing land mines	US $5M
3	United Kingdom	aid package to "support current ongoing democratic reforms" and another $300M over the next 3 years	US $5M
4	European Union	technical assistance for clearing landmines and landmine education programs	3 to 4 million euros
5	The World Bank	provided cash and technical assistance in the construction of infrastructure and socio-economic improvement programs, as well as paying debts, opened a new country office in Yangon on Aug.1, 2012, will be submitting plans to its board to offer as much as $85M million in grants for the country's development e.g. build roads, schools and other projects	eligible to borrow $300M yearly

In addition:

Norway has provided financial support through the Euro Burma Office (EBO) (July -Dec. 2012):

#	Description	Amount
1	ethnic groups for liaison offices	€375,000
2	WGEC activities - meeting, workshops, consultations	€50,000
3	IPSG-type activities	€25,000

Finland has provided financial support through the EBO (July -Dec. 2012):

#	Description	Amount
1	WGEC activities	€50,000
2	IPSG-type activities - training, workshops, consultations exposure trips, etc.	€100,000

Finland has also appointed Kimmo Kiljunen as Special Representative to regional peace and mediation tasks

International Peace Support Group (IPSG)

The International Peace Support Group is made up of INGOs involved in capacity building initiatives to support the ethnic armed groups negotiate for just and equitable peace. It is an informal network of 20 members that holds a coordination meeting once a month in Bangkok. These include the International Crisis Group (ICG), Center for Humanitarian dialogue (the HD Centre), Euro-Burma Office (EBO) and Fairness International.

Japan - Nippon Foundation

In June of 2012, the Japanese government appointed Sasakawa Yohei, the chairman of the Nippon Foundation as the Ambassador for the welfare of ethnic minorities in Myanmar to coordinate its assistance for the ethnic peace process. The Japanese foundation has been working with the UNFC on their plans for the peace process. They were also requested by the UNFC to act as a foreign mediator during negotiations with the government. The government has not responded to the UNFC's request but allowed members from the Nippon Foundation to attend several meetings as observers.

Nippon Foundation donated $3M for humanitarian aid relief to be distributed in ethnic minority areas of Myanmar, beginning with an initial aid package of $300,000 and the monitoring of its distribution.³³ U Aung Min said that the Japanese government eventually plans to provide another $300M in support for refugee relief programs, $60M of which will come directly from the Nippon Foundation.³⁴ The aid package was officially launched on Dec. 22, 2012 in Mon state.

Timeline of events:

April 24, 2012	Three UNFC Central Committee members met with the Japanese Nippon Foundation and some government officials in Tokyo to discuss the ongoing conflict and peace talks with the Myanmar government.
June 2012	Sasakawa Yohei was appointed as the Japanese government's goodwill ambassador for the welfare of ethnic minorities in Myanmar. During a trip to Myanmar the same month, Yohei met with President Thein Sein and National League for Democracy (NLD) opposition leader Daw Aung San Suu Kyi.

34 <http://www.mmtimes.com/index.php/national-news/3668-nippon-foundation-sends-aid-to-conflict-areas.html>

Sept. 23, 2012	The Nippon Foundation signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU) with the UNFC for the relief plan.
Oct. 6, 2012	The Nippon Foundation signed a MOU with the Myanmar government allowing them to carry out humanitarian aid relief in the ethnic areas.
Mid-October, 2012	A twenty member UNFC delegation, with representatives from 10 ethnic minority groups, worked out the details of the relief plan with the Nippon Foundation during the Conference on Emergency Humanitarian Aid to Myanmar Ethnic Groups in Tokyo. This was followed by a press conference at the Nippon Foundation's head office where they presented an outline of the plan on Oct.18.
Dec. 22, 2012	The project was launched during an official ceremony in Mon state capital Mawlamyine, during which representatives from the foundation gave emergency supplies worth $70,000 to the New Mon State Party (NMSP). The supplies included 50 tons of rice, medical supplies for hospitals and 500 boxes of traditional herbal medicine.
Jan. 12, 2013	Nippon Foundation donated 1,200 bags of rice to Pa-O National Liberation Organization (PNLO) peace group at Taunggyi Hotel in Taunggyi, Shan state.

Neighboring China, India, Thailand and Bangladesh

Four of Myanmar's neighboring countries are all critical players and stakeholders in the country's ethnic politics. Sharing a porous border with the same ethnic populations living on both sides means that Myanmar's ethnic problems also affects them. The Myanmar government's policies regarding the peace process will influence the stability of the border for its neighbors. Some of these influences include: refugees/IDPs, drug trafficking and economic development.

China: Yunnan officials and intelligence agents maintain close, but largely informal contacts with some of the ethnic armed groups, namely the Kachin (KIO), Wa (UWSA), Kokang (MNDAA) and Mongla (NDAA-ESS). China plays a crucial role in ensuring and providing for both the livelihood and survival of these groups e.g. economic assistance, trading, provision of electricity, water and telecommunications and unofficially accepting refugees.

Thailand: Thailand similarly maintain close contact with border militia groups (RCSS/SSA, KNU, KNPP and NMSP) through local authorities and intelligence agents. The country also hosts a large population of refugees and migrant workers from Myanmar. Currently Thailand is developing special economic zones, large industrial projects and roads through the ethnic areas both along the country's border and neighboring Myanmar.

India: India is working closely with the Myanmar government to fight against its northeast insurgent groups. The country has complained that insurgents continue to launch attacks against the Indian army from bases inside Myanmar. India is also developing better economic relations with Myanmar by opening free trade zones, building roads and investment projects like the Sittwe port in Rakhine state and Tamanthi dam in Sagaing Division.

Bangladesh: In comparison to Myanmar's other neighbors, Bangladesh does not maintain close ties with border militia groups. The country has accepted many Muslim Rohingyas in the past. But they closed their border during the sectarian violence between Buddhists and Muslims in Arakan state in June and October of 2012, despite UN requests to provide them refuge. Bangladesh would like to develop a special economic zone on the border but the Myanmar government have not complied with their proposal.

ASEAN: For the most part, ASEAN and member countries have not participated in Myanmar's peace process. The small role that the alliance have played involved information and experience sharing for peace negotiations with armed ethnic groups and addressing the ethnic crisis in Rakhine state.

Committee for Ethnic Minorities of SRV (Vietnam): The Committee for Ethnic Minorities of SRV (Vietnam) met with Myanmar's Ministry of Border Affairs in Yangon on Dec.10, 2012. During the bilateral consultation the signing of an amendment was made to the Agreement of Cooperation between Ministry of Border Affairs and the Committee for Ethnic Minorities of SRV. This was aimed at strengthening the friendship between the two countries through exchanging experiences that will lead to further cooperation in cultural, education, social affairs and economic affairs in border and rural areas.

In an event organized by Geneva-based Center for Humanitarian Dialogue, Chairman of the Indonesian Red Cross (PMI) and former vice president Jusuf Kalla and a Filipino government team working on insurgency in the country's south met with Aung Min and members of the Myanmar Peacemaking Work Committee in Naypyidaw on Sept.10, 2012. The former Indonesian vice president was joined by former law and human rights minister Hamid Awaluddin, who led the government's negotiating team in the Helsinki peace talks with the Free Aceh Movement (GAM), and former Indonesian Military (TNI) Commander Gen. Endriartono Sutarto.

The Myanmar Peace Center invited ASEAN Foundation Executive Director Dr. Makarim Wibisono and Mr. Pratap Parameswaran, an official from the ASEAN Secretariat, for an informal brainstorming session on the peace process in Myanmar. Information about the ASEAN Institute for Peace and Reconciliation (AIPR) that was launched during the ASEAN Summit in November, 2012 in Phnom Penh, Cambodia, was discussed during the meeting.

U.S.: The U.S. involvement in the Myanmar peace process has been largely through the issuing of statements and making recommendations to the government and some ethnic armed groups.

President Barack Obama made a historic visit to the country on Nov.19, 2012 with Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton. This was the first ever trip by a U.S. president to Myanmar. During the trip Obama mentioned the importance of ending the conflict in Kachin state and solving the crisis in Rakhine state.

Hillary Clinton also sent a delegation to visit Myanmar and Bangladesh to learn first-hand about the situation in Myanmar's Rakhine State, including areas in the vicinity of the border. The delegation, led by the Bureau of East Asia and Pacific Affairs' Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary Joseph Yun and Ambassador Derek Mitchell, visited from Sept. 7-10, 2012.

US Ambassador Derek Mitchell led an 8 member delegation to visit Kachin state to visit relief camps and meet with local leaders in mid-December 2012. Mitchell discussed the possibility of providing aid to IDP camps in KIA controlled territories. He also visited Karen state to meet with key KNU leaders in Hpa-an in early January, 2013. During this time, Mitchell and Karen leaders discussed a range of issues about the current political climate, the ceasefire between the KNU and the government, and ceasefires with the other ethnic armed groups.

The U.S. has provided aid through USAID for Peace and Reconciliation.³⁵

According to USAID's 2013 factsheet, its program covers strengthening the capacity of key leaders within ethnic and religious groups and between communities and newly formed government structures (focusing on women), landmine assistance, and humanitarian assistance. In the fiscal year of 2012, USAID and state humanitarian assistance to the country amounted to over $30 million which were channeled through OCHA, UNICEF, WFP, UNHCR and other INGOs.

International Mediation

UNFC has asked the Chinese government (October 2011) and Japanese government (April 2012) to act as mediators in peace talks with the government, but both refused.

There have a number of international observers in some of the talks between ethnic armed groups and the government:

KNPP (state level talks) March 7, 2012: U.S. attaché Andrew Webster, Second Secretary of the British Embassy Joe Fisher, and United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees representative Hans ten Feld were observers during the talks.

KNU April, 2012: Kristine Gould (PACRIM Research Associates), Emma Leslie (Center for Peace and Conflict Studies) and US embassy representative Craig Haltmeier.

Second talks: Sept.3, 2012: Three foreign observers were also present Ms. Meghan. Stewart, (Public International Policy Group), Emma Leslie (Center for Peace and Conflict Studies) and US embassy representative Craig Haltmeier.

CNF (code of conduct meeting) Dec.7, 2012: Kristine Gould (PACRIM Research Associates, USA), Mr. Yohei Sasakawa (Chairman, Nippon Foundation, Japan), Mr. Yiji Mori (Nippon Foundation, Japan), Ms. Suzuka Yoshida (Nippon Foundation, Japan), Charles Petrie (Myanmar Peace Support Initiative)

Business Peace Mediators

All KIO and KNU peace talks with the government have been mediated and facilitated by prominent businessmen who have vested interests in industrial or resource extraction in Myanmar.

Kachin businessman Yup Zau Hkaung of the Jadeland Company is heading a Peace Talk Creation Group along with other Kachin businessmen, Lamai Gum Ja, Hkapara Khun Awng and N'Shen Hsan Awng. The group have been instrumental in brokering talks between the KIO and government. The Peace Talk Creation Group has arranged and provided financial assistance for the meetings. The group also has a 7 member official documentation team.

The Dawei Princess Company is involved in facilitating the peace process between the KNU and Myanmar government. U Ko Ko Maung, the company director, and U Ngwe Soe, managing director, attended all of the peace meetings between the KNU and government. The Dawei Princess Company finances, organizes and even provides travel arrangements for the government peace delegation during the peace talks with the KNU. Karen News also reported that the company paid for the setup and operating costs of the KNU liaison office in Dawei (Tavoy) town. The Dawei Princess Company, also known as Hein Yadana Moe, is a sub-contractor for the $60B Dawei Special Economic Zone that is in part of the KNU's controlled area.

Community-Based and Civil Society Groups

Activities can be categorized into three main areas:

1. Peace talks facilitation - facilitating and mediating peace talks (e.g. Karen Peace Support team, Shalom Foundation for KIO talks),
2. Monitoring peace talks and ceasefire agreement - monitoring both ethnic armed groups and government actions and violations relating to ceasefires and peace agreements (e.g. Mon Regions Peace Monitoring Group, Shan Women Action Network, Karenni Civic Society Network)
3. Ceasefire implementation - carrying out development and assistance programs, monitoring human rights, environmental issues (e.g. Committee for Internally Displaced Karen People, Karen Office for Relief and Development, Shan Relief and Development Committee)
4. Policy and peace advocacy - activities promoting peace: protests, rallies or prayer meetings (e.g. Women's League of Burma, White Holding Hands, Peace Network, Kachin Peace Network, Generation Wave)

It is still unclear exactly which groups are involved in what activities or their connections to various INGOs and donors. Several are involved with the MPSI such as the Norwegian People's Aid (NPA). Many have been advising both the government and ethnic armed groups on ceasefire talks as part of the IPSG. In addition to these, some are working independently with individual armed groups observing the peace talks, providing training and consultation (e.g. Center for Peace and Conflict Studies (CPCS), Swiss Peace).

At a Myanmar Peace Center meeting on Jan.27, 2013 that was hosted by Aung Min for CBOs involved in the peace process the following groups were involved:

Exile groups

The Thein Sein government has encouraged exile groups to return to Myanmar to cooperate with them in achieving peace and implementing democratic reforms in the country. Following the release of many prominent political prisoners and leaders in November, 2011 many individuals and groups that have been in exile for over 20 years were invited to return home. Some of these include:

Efforts to resolve the Rakhine state crisis

Government

The government has been actively holding discussions and workshops that they say will identify the reasons and find solutions to the crisis affecting Rakhine state. They set up an investigation commission to achieve these goals.

The government claims to be taking the necessary steps to amend the citizenship law so that those deemed eligible will be granted citizenship. However the situation in Rakhine state still remains extremely volatile. Thousands are still displaced - the majority of which are Rohingya Muslims - and the government has done little to rectify this. Nor have steps been taken to address the rampant poverty and landlessness experienced by Rohingya Muslims and Rakhine Buddhists that existed prior to the June and October violence and arguably played a significant role in fueling the crisis. This impoverishment affects the majority of the population despite the construction of several multi-billion dollar industrial projects in the state most notably the Shwe Gas project.

Investigation Commission on communal strife in Rakhine State

Formed: Aug.17, 2012

Contact: rcic.information@gmail.com

27 members of the government-sanctioned commission, including:

1. Dr. Myo Myint, chairman
2. Dr. Kyaw Yin Hlaing, Myanmar Egress
3. Maung Wuntha, journalist
4. Zarganar, comedian
5. Ko Ko Gyi, 88 Generation leader
6. Dr. Yin Yin Nwe, retired UNICEF senior officer
7. Aye Thar Aung, Arakan League for Democracy (ALD)
8. Dr. Aye Maung, Rakhine Nationalities Development Party (RNDP)
9. Khun Tun Oo, Shan Nationalities League for Democracy (SNLD)
10. Than Than Nu, Democratic Party (Myanmar)
11. Khin Maung Swe, National Democratic Force (NDF)
12. Aung Naing Oo, Vahu Development Institute (VDI)
13. Tun Aung Chein, Myanmar National Human Rights Commission (NHRC)

Others members include legal experts, businesspeople and religious leaders. Presently there are no Muslims included in the commission. Haji Nyunt Maung Shein and Haji Tin Maung Than (respectively the president and secretary of the Islamic Religious Affairs Council Headquarters) were both members but were forced to resign last year for allegedly not following the principles of the commission.

Sept. 8-15, 2012: first tour to the affected region, visits were made to Rakhine state capital Sittwe, Kyauktaw, Rathedaung, Buthidaung, Maungdaw, Mrauk U, Ramree and Taunggoke townships.

Sept. 17, 2012: first press conference in Yangon, Maung Wuntha said the commission will form 8 sub-committees delegated to various tasks of the investigation, their findings will be compiled in November and then presented to the president, the commission stated they may need more time to produce an accurate report, the original Sept. 17 deadline was extended by 3 months.

March 2013: report expected to be released.

Local Community

Sept.25, 2012: An estimated 3,000 people attended a two-day public forum on resolving the sectarian tensions between Arakanese Buddhists and Rohingya Muslims. The meeting took place in a Buddhist monastery in Rathedaung, 20 miles north of the Rakhine state capital Sittwe.

Sept.18, 2012: According to NLD party leader Aung San Suu Kyi the government should defuse the explosive situation in Rakhine state. She claimed the NLD is in no position to decide what to do, or what measures to take because they are not the party in power.

International Community

The Rakhine state crisis has received immense international attention and assistance from various sources. UN humanitarian agencies and foreign aid teams have been monitoring, coordinating international aid and providing assistance for refugees resulting from the communal conflict.

Muslim countries and the Organization of Islamic Countries (OIC) has been especially active in trying to provide assistance to Rohingya victims. The OIC appointed the former Indonesian Vice President Jusuf Kalla as the special envoy to Myanmar to oversee matters involving the sectarian violence. On Sept.11, 2012 a memorandum was signed to open 2 OIC Offices for Humanitarian Affairs - one in Rakhine state and another in Yangon. However it was cancelled after thousands of Buddhist monks and other people protested against the opening of the offices in Mandalay, Yangon, Rakhine state and the US.

IV. Prospects for Peace

Suggestions for stakeholders and key issues hindering peace:

Distrust and lack of confidence	More regard needs to be taken to resolve ongoing clashes between several of the ethnic armed groups and the government and address concerns about the excessive military power reserved in the 2008 Constitution More transparency and effective communication is needed to overcome mistrust In the case of military movements, clear coordination and communication is essential to prevent unintended conflicts
Escalating conflict in Kachin state	An immediate solution is needed to stop the conflict in Kachin and northern Shan states from spiraling further out of control, the situation has now become a vicious cycle in which the higher the incidences of fatalities, the more emotionally invested the opposing armies become. This is making both sides resort to revenge tactics and diverting energy from finding solutions that will bring about peace The longer the conflict continues the harder it is to build confidence, not only between the government and combatant groups, but also those attempting to make headway in peace negotiations
No political settlement reached that details how power will be shared between the government and ethnic armed groups	The government's peace plan expects ethnic armed groups to transform into political parties and compete in elections, thereby gaining the necessary power to make amendments to the 2008 Constitution This does not guarantee or clearly define how the ethnic militia groups can win enough seats to make amendments when the military is reserved 25% of parliament In addition they believe that state level parliament does not have any real power As a result, they want a guarantee of ethnic rights and more power on the state-level than currently stipulated in the 2008 Constitution
Border Guard Force/ People's Militia Force issue	An alternative plan for ethnic armed groups and the government, to coordinate and/or gradually integrate all of the various armed forces in the country

Fair and transparent distribution of resource revenue generated in ethnic states	Clear revenue sharing needs to be worked out In particular, some of the revenues from natural resources extraction and industrial projects in ethnic areas need to be reinvested to benefit the local community
Confusing and contradicting information about peace process activities	Policies and activities of ethnic armed groups, government bodies, CBOs and international agencies currently lack coherence and transparency - further complicating an already complex situation More knowledge and clarity regarding the activities of all stakeholders is critical in forming a coordinated and effective peace process Information about relevant activities is often not recorded in a systematic manner, making it difficult to understand and therefore plan and implement effective policies

Developments

Ceasefire: 06/01/2012

Liaison Offices: Thanglang, Tedim and Matupi towns

Rights and Responsibilities for Liaison Offices

Both parties agreed that if the liaison officer is a central committee member of the CNF they will receive treatment that is consistent with the diplomatic protocols reflecting their position. The Chin state government shall provide necessary measures to ensure the physical security of the liaison officer. The parties accept to observe the rules defined in the ceasefire within the territorial areas that have been designated, and in accordance with the existing laws of the Chin state government

Panglong Agreement:

Both parties agreed in principle to points that were signed during the Panglong Agreement (Feb.12, 1947) by Bamar leader General Aung San and other ethnic groups in Panglong, Shan state.

Discussions regarding the military code of conduct for the Myanmar army and other ethnic armed groups were also discussed.

Monitoring

- The formation of "Ceasefire Monitoring Body" consisting primarily of the Chin Peace and Tranquility Committee but also with active participation from other legal experts.
- The formation of a crisis mediating body that will arbitrate any physical violence resulting from accidental nature between the CNF and Myanmar army. It is agreed that such a mediating body shall be formed under the leadership of the Chin state Security and Border Affairs minister and will also involve both the CNF liaison officer and CNA leaders responsible for the areas where such incident occurs. This can also include the in-charge/commander of the CNF/CNA, commander of the Myanmar army, police force, chairman of the Chin Peace Monitoring Body or any such duly authorized individual.

Controlled areas

CNF/CNA will be temporarily based out around 5 village tracts in 2 townships. These include: Tlangpi, Dawn and Zang Tlang village tracts in Thantlang Township, and Zampi and Bukphir village tracts in Tedim Township.

Other possible bases will include: Kung Pin, Ra O, Shweletwa, and Ra Kan village tracts in Paletwa Township; Para and Pathiantlang, Belhar, Vanzang, Lungding, Lulpilung in village tracts in Tedim Township; Dampi, Tui Dial village tracts in Thantlang Township. CNF opened Camp Victoria in Thantlang Township (January, 2013). The military camp will serve as their new headquarters.

Military

- agreed to allow the presence of only the Myanmar army and the CNF within Chin state
- CNF must obtain permission from the government before conducting military exercises
 - A CNA refresher training course covering public relations was held on the Indo-Myanmar border on Oct. 24, 2012.

Economic

- with the financial support from the Union government the CNF will play a leading role in developing the state in accordance with laws governing the new Special Economic Zone (SEZ)
- both parties will cooperate on development projects
- permission for INGOs and social economic organizations (both inside and outside the country) to support development initiatives that will improve the quality of life for Chin state residents
- CNF will establish committees or organizations to carry out new development initiatives in cooperation with domestic/international social economic organizations and INGOs
- the Union government will construct at least 2 airports.
 - The govt is building a domestic airport in Surbung mountain in Falam Township, Chin state. The site was surveyed by a CNF delegation, administrator of Falam Township and residents on Dec.19, 2012.
- the construction of a national highway that will connect northern Tonzang Township to southern Paletwa Township
- restrictions lifted for international tourists to travel in the state
- development of information technology and computer skills
- basic services such as water, electricity, food, security, health and education to be made available to everyone
- CNF allowed to seek independent funding for implementing development projects in the state

Social

- the establishment of a community radio broadcast program for promoting Chin media and culture in each of the various dialects
- the Chin language will be taught in primary education schools
- open schools to promote Chin culture and music
- religious freedom
- no discrimination on the basis ethnicity, religion and gender for civil service positions

- official registration allowed for community-based organizations and Chin media e.g newspapers, journals, magazines, newsletters, radio, internet and television programs
- both parties will cooperate in the development of out of state guest houses for travelling Chins (Naypyidaw, Yangon, Mandalay, Pakhuku, Kalay, Sittwe, Seih Town).

Political

- CNF granted permission to hold public consultations regarding the peace process (20/11/ 2012: preliminary meeting for an upcoming CNF's public consultation took place in Matupi, Chin state).
- consideration made towards the international agreements that have been acceded to by the Union government, including other international human rights moral obligations
- official recognition of Chin National Day (Feb. 20) and Chin State Day on (Feb. 3)
- under existing laws the CNF/CNA are still considered unlawful organizations by the Union government, both parties have agreed this will be amended at a later date once full confidence has been firmly established
- both parties agreed that the Union-level Peace Working Committee (UPWC) team will submit a list of any individual(s) who have been arrested and imprisoned on account of CNF/ CNA activities to the president's office for immediate amnesty (effective after the signing of this agreement)
- UPWC will remove the names of all individuals who have been blacklisted for being affiliated or members of CNF/CNA (effective after the signing of this agreement)
- CNF/CNA members immune from criminal prosecution for being part of the organization (effective after the signing of this agreement)
- cooperation to uphold human rights, punish violators in accordance with the 2008 Constitution
- the formation of an independent Chin human rights committee

Drugs:

- both parties agreed to cooperate in the eradication of poppy cultivation and other illegal drug businesses, this includes smuggling operations in northern Chin state
 - drug production is increasing despite the agreement

Environment:

- environmental impact assessments shall be conducted on all in state development projects by an independent committee of experts
- both parties agreed that the extraction of natural resources in Chin State will adhere to the points stipulated in the ceasefire agreement

Resettlement:

- all Chin nationals who have resettled abroad will be allowed to return and assistance will be provided for issuing visas

- the state immigration department will issue national identity cards for CNF/CNA members after a membership list is submitted

Statements

SUMMARY

Founded: Feb.5, 1961

Headquarters: Laiza, Kachin state

Operational Area: 5 brigades across Kachin state and Northern Shan state

Estimated strength: 7,000 to 10,000 (excluding the KIO's MHH and MKM civilian militia forces)

Leader: Lanyaw Zawng Hra (Chairman), N'Ban La (Vice-Chairman), Gouri Zau Seng (Vice-Chairman), Gen. Gam Shawng (Commander-in-Chief), Gen. Gum Maw (Deputy Commander-in-Chief), Dr. La Ja (General Secretary), Sin Wa (deputy GS 1), U La Nan (deputy GS 2/ Spokesperson)

The KIO's armed wing the Kachin Independence Army (KIA) is the second largest ethnic armed group in Myanmar. The KIO claims to have 10,000 troops with another 10,000 reservists in the civilian population ready to fight. The KIO generates large revenues from its rich natural resources, which has enabled them to create a powerful army and develop trade centers in several cities along the Sino-Myanmar border. e.g. Laiza, Mai Ja Yang

A 17-year ceasefire, which for many years was the only written agreement that the government had with any armed group, ended less than 3 months after the nominally civilian government took power. The contributing factor was the KIO's refusal to join the government's BGF scheme. Construction of the Myitsone dam - the water reservoir would of flooded large tracts of land in KIO-controlled territories - was also a major source of tension. Although the Myanmar state media started referring to the KIO as an illegal organization from 2009- 2010, the ceasefire didn't unravel until government troops attacked the KIO's Sang Gang outpost on June 9, 2011.

12	04/02/13	Ruili, China	Sumlut Gam	Aung Min	Release joint statement to continue peace talks. Chinese govt officials were present.

Rejected meeting invitations:

01/06/2011 KIO's demand for political dialogue and withdrawal of the army from locations close to the areas under control of the KIA as a precondition to further talks were turned down by the government delegation.

09/07/2012 KIA refused to attend scheduled meeting in Bhamo because of an army offensive launched during the weekend near Laiza. The Deputy Commander-in-Chief of the Army, Gen. Soe Win was also scheduled to attend the talks.

25/08/2012 KIO rejected an invitation from the government to hold peace talks in Naypyidaw saying it would be "impossible" to meet in the country's capital while its own headquarters remains under siege.

15/04/2012 Rejection of 4th meeting in Myitkyina. Spokesman La Nang said the KIO could not meet in Myitkyina at this time because the government has escalated its military activities in the area, reinforced troops near KIO headquarters in Laiza, and appeared to be preparing for an assault on KIO outposts.

Developments

The KIO agreed to continue talks with the government through the UNFC at a venue outside of government controlled areas of Myanmar (Jan.22, 2013).

They want a formal "political dialogue" but will not take part in 'ceasefire talks". They are advocating for a pushing for an all-inclusive ethnic conference similar that follows the 1947 Panglong agreement. A wide range of ethnic issues and political problems could be discussed with the government, including the release of prisoners on both sides and the rebuilding of villages affected by the long-running war among ethnic groups

It was reported in June, 2012 that the government decided to drop Article 17/1 outlawing the KIO. However both the army and police officials continue to arrest people under 17/1 and those already charged were never released.

The KIO and Kachin peace brokers close to the Myanmar government opened a "justice and negotiation center" in Prang Ngawn, a village in Loijay Township. The center is supposed to be used for future negotiations and will store all records about the peace talks. It will also be place where "anyone can come and give advice" about the peace process (18/09/2012). The center has not yet been be used for peace talks.

Clashes

2,400 clashes (according to KIO) 1095 clashes (according to government)

- At least 700 KIA soldiers are reported to have died since October, 2012 (anonymous source close to govt) It is believed that many died after the government launched a large scale offensive on KIO positions near Laiza in December 2012. Unofficial KIO estimates of the government death toll ranges from 5,000 -10,000 (anonymous source close to KIO)
- 35 govt soldiers killed, 190 injured (according to govt figures)
- Over 100,000 IDPs from Kachin and northern Shan states (various public sources)
- 56 attacks on railroad tracks from Mandalay to Myitkyina, 15 attacks on Myitkyina-Sumprabum road, 42 times attacks on Myitkyina-Bhamo road (govt source)
- attacks on infrastructures such as communication towers, 1 electric power grid, 1 power plant (govt source)

Partnerships

The 88 Generation Students Group leaders held a meeting with high-ranking officials from the KIO/KIA in Laiza, Kachin state. (06/01/2013)

International observers

Harn Yawngwe of the Euro Burma office and representatives of the Switzerland-based Center for Humanitarian Dialogue have attended some of the talks as observers.

Statements

- demanded that the agreement be signed in the presence of an international organization; called on Japan to act as an international mediator in peace talks with the government (27/4/12)
- the government and ethnic Kachin rebels are blaming each other for fighting in northern Myanmar, the government is denying it carried out air attacks on rebel-held territory
- the Myanmar public has a right to know how many soldiers have been killed during the Kachin conflict, the war is taking up large amounts of the national budget, it could be spent on far better things like healthcare and education (24/09/2012)
- the KIO urged U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon to intervene in the Kachin conflict and do more to provide humanitarian aid to an estimated 75,000 internally displaced persons (26/09/2011, 01/05/2012, 15/05/2012), they also called on all stakeholders and the international community to help find a solution
- called to stop offensives (16/09/2012, 28/02/2012)
- claims that the government's peace process is just a show for the government as they continue to reinforce troops (03/11/2011)
- a KIO official said that the failure of talks was because Myanmar government ministers did not accept that fighting between the two sides is a political issue. (06/12/2011, 19/04/2012)

Developments

Agreed points:

State level

- 1) Cease-fire
- 2) Open liaison offices
- 3) To officially form the representative teams leading up to Union-Level peace talks, coordinate date, time and place for meetings

Union Level:

1. To discuss the demarcation of controlled territories, define military camp locations and movement
2. Follow terms in the Panglong agreement
3. To hold talks with all ethnic ceasefire groups, organizations and political parties
4. Formation of a local monitoring group made up of approved members representing both sides
5. Formation of observer group made up of approved members representing both sides
6. Agree to stop fighting in all areas of Kayah state
7. Cooperate with INGOs and NGOs on health, education and social development, communicate with the Kayah state government
8. Kayah state government will form an observer group to survey public opinion about construction of a govt military training school
9. Release all KNPP members and affiliates

10. KNPP will cooperate with the government's Human Rights Commission, both sides agree to form a locally based human rights monitoring group
11. Cooperate with State and Union government to eradicate drug production and implement drug rehabilitation
12. Both sides will discuss the systematic resettlement of IDPs; the government will assist in the resettlement of KNPP families providing support for business ventures

In March, 2012 the KNPP submitted a 20 point position paper for consideration from the Union government's. They agreed in principle to 14 of these points in May; the remaining contentious issues related to demarcation and separation of troops, and large scale development projects. A KNPP statement that said the political party would focus on improving living standards for its constituents as opposed to business opportunities was well received.

Ongoing issues:

1. Salween Dam (Ywa Thit hydro-electric dam)
2. Withdrawal of government's forces from Kayah state
3. KNPP demands to transform a military training center into a social center
4. CBOs will form an observer group for careful monitoring of large development projects in the state

Ongoing clashes

June 27, 2012: Fighting broke out between government troops and the KNPP near Mawchi area, highlighting the need for both parties to focus on resolving military conflicts in upcoming peace talks.

<http://www.bnionline.net/index.php/news/kantarawaddy/13840-karenni-peace-talks-must-include-two-key-points-to-preserve-ceasefire.html>

Fourteen Myanmar army battalions are permanently based in Kayah State. In addition, there are 6 roving battalions from neighboring Shan state, plus 1 special battalion that provides security for Ywa-thit dam. With the cessation of hostilities, government soldiers are frequenting villages near their bases much more. Security regulations previously required off-duty soldiers to remain in the barracks between 4 - 9 am, but many communities have reported soldiers are now staying in villages well into the night. This interaction might help build trust, but the increased troop presence is also increasing anxieties. (TBC 2012)

Partnerships

KNPP, KNLP, KNPLF (cooperation on health programs)

Leaders of 88-Generation Student Group and KNPP will cooperate to create a genuine Union' in which all ethnic nationalities will have the power to create their own destinies. An 88-Generation delegation led by student leader Mya Aye met with a KNPP delegation at the KNPP liaison office in Loikaw, Kayah state to discuss the current political climate in Myanmar (11/9/12). A six-point joint statement was issued that called for genuine peace talks and urged the government to stop all fighting in Kachin state as soon as possible. The two groups will cooperate with all the groups that support democracy.

Derek Mitchell, US ambassador to Myanmar, and Jerry White, deputy assistant secretary for Partnerships and Bureau of Conflict and Stabilization Operations met with a KNPP delegation in Loikaw to discuss the development of the peace process between the government and KNPP. The ambassador said the US will provide humanitarian assistance. They also discussed removing landmines in the state. (26/10/2012)

Business concessions:

Since September, 2010 KNPP started the Kayah Land company (lead exploration) and Tamaw Htar (import/export of teak wood).

Developments

Agreed points:

Pan-ethnic dialogue

- to establish nationwide ceasefire - establishing a ceasefire especially in the ethnic nationality regions

Monitoring

- to start the necessary arrangements for monitoring, analyzing and rectifying the peace process
- The Karen Baptist Convention (Burma) has invited officials from the KNU and community based organizations from the Thai-Myanmar border to attend a meeting to explain the ongoing 'peace talks' with the government (17/11/2012)

Political:

- to guarantee life, security and freedom from fear
- to develop the state to build confidence amongst the Karen
- to stop forced labour, arbitrary taxation and extortion of villagers
- to release political prisoners and resolve rehabilitation and land problems for civilians
- 19/03/2012 Myanmar pardoned Nyein Maung, a member of the Karen National Union (KNU) central committee

Resettlement:

- national registration cards
 - started

Military

- ceasefire Code of conduct - 34 points

Ongoing issues:

- relocation of government troops
- 07/09/2012 KNU requested for the government to move 90 of their 300 military bases areas from KNU-controlled territories
- allow national media outlets to participate in the peace process to provide accurate information about developments
- support the basic needs of the people and ensure that development projects have the full participation and support of residents
- set out clear principles for all parties to ensure a genuine peace process
- legitimate representatives involved in negotiations, provide adequate time for their consultation with respective constituencies and establish a clear roles for third parties
- implement a flexible process that guarantees progress will lead towards sustainable peace, all parties speak frankly, avoid using words that are easily misunderstood or misconstrued

Repercussions

Internal conflict: KNLA Commander-in-Chief Gen. Mutu Say Poe and Central Committee members David Taw and Roger Khin were dismissed by the KNU for violating protocol by visiting Pa-an the previous week to set up a liaison office. (02/10/2012). However the KNU executive committee managed to iron out differences resulting from divisions over the peace talks with the government during the Central Standing Committee (CSC) (27/11/2012). Both Mutu Say Poe and Roger Khin were reinstated. Mutu Say Poe was eventually elected as the new chairman in December, 2012. (21/12/2012) David Taw died shortly after his dismissal resulting from deteriorating health conditions.

Clashes

Skirmishes have decreased as a result of the new ceasefire and ongoing peace talks with the government. However Karen state remains heavily militarized resulting in some clashes between the KNLA and Myanmar army.

KNU	5 clashes	Papun, Hlaing Bwe, Beelin Townships	8 soldiers killed, 2 soldiers injured
-----	-----------	-------------------------------------	---------------------------------------

Reports are circulating that government troops are preparing for an offensive against the KNLA's Brigade 5 in northern Karen state after the brigade barred them from conducting gold mining and other businesses in rebel-held territory. (03/01/2013)

The KNU claim the government army's is forcing Karen civilians to attend militia training, jeopardizing ongoing 'peace talks'. (21/11/2012)

Partnership

KNU leader Zipporah Sein met with NLD opposition leader Daw Aung San Suu Kyi in Yangon. (08/04/2012)

Karen community based organizations (CBOs).

Facilitators

The Dawei Princess Company is involved in facilitating the peace process between the KNU and Myanmar government. Company boss U Ko Ko Maung and Managing Director U Ngwe Soe have attended all the peace meetings between the KNU and government. Dawei Princess Company finances and arranges the meetings and travel for the government peace delegation. Karen News also reported that they paid for the setup and the running cost of the KNU liaison office in Dawei (Tavoy) town. The Dawei Princess Company, also known as Hein Yadana Moe, is a sub-contractor in the $60B Dawei Special Economic Zone, which includes part of the KNU's controlled area

Kyauk Kyi Project Pilot project: 2010 - present

A $5M (US) pilot project has been initiated in Kyauk Kyi Township, Bago Region. The project will focus primarily on resettling the estimated 1.5M Karen internally displaced people (IDPs). But it will also be used to provide food, farming equipment, clearing land mines and establishing liaison offices. The project that's receiving funding through the Norwegian People's Aid (NPA) is based on a needs assessment undertaken by the KNU-related Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) assistance group, Committee of Internally Displaced Karen People (CIDKP), and also involves an initial non-technical survey of landmines in target areas. Current status: Monitoring and Evaluation (Jan.15, 2013), As of September, 2012 the CIDKP distributed 517 bags of rice to villagers. Over the next few months, it's expected that other items such as different food products, mosquito nets and cooking utensils will also be delivered. http://www.emb-norway.or.th/News_and_events/MPSI/Monitoring-report-Kyauk-Kyi/

New Mon State Party

မွန်ပြည်သစ်ပါတီ

Armed wing: Mon National Liberation Army (MNLA)

<http://www.nmsp.info/>

UNFC member

SUMMARY

Founded: July, 1958

Headquarters: Ye Chaung Phya, Mon state

Operational Area: Thaton, Paung, Chaungson, Moulmein, Hpa-an, Kawkareik, Kyeikmayaw, Mudon, Thanbyzayap, Ye, Yayphyu, Three Pagoda Pass, Mergui-Tavoy, and Kyar-Inn-Seik Gyi

Estimated strength: 800+ (2,000 reserved)

Leader: Naing Htaw Mon

Mon separatists formed the Mon Peoples Front (MPF). The group was later reformed and renamed as the New Mon State Party (NMSP). Since 1949, the eastern hills of the state (as well as portions of Thaninthaya Division) have been under NMSP control. In 1995, they agreed to a ceasefire with the Myanmar government.

The NMSP tried unsuccessfully to promote constitutional and political reform through the National Convention until 2008. Communications broke down in April, 2010 after refusing to transform into a Border Guard Force (BGF). However the situation did not deteriorate into outright armed conflict. Negotiations during the past year led to the renewal of the ceasefire agreement at the state-level and a commitment from the government to negotiate ceasefire agreements with all non-state armed groups before the end of 2012 so that inclusive political dialogue can commence at the Union level.

The Myanmar military originally granted the group nominal control of an area of Mon state spread out over 12 cantonments, largely along the Ye River and two areas to the north in Thaton and Moulmein Districts. In addition they were also given 17 industrial concessions in areas such as logging, fishing, inland transportation and gold mining, and were also allowed to make trade agreements with companies in Malaysia and Singapore.

The Myanmar military recognized the creation of 3 refugee camps along the Thai-Myanmar border. These camps, based at Halochanee, Bee Ree, and Tavoy in Mon state, were supported by the Mon Relief and Development Committee (MRDC) with cross-border assistance from the Thai-Burma Border Consortium (TBBC) - now known as The Border Consortium (TBC)

The Myanmar military originally agreed to supply the NMSP with four million kyat (nearly US $3,500) in economic aid each month for the political body to function, however, this ended in 2005 after the NMSP boycotted the National Convention. A number of other concessions were also later withdrawn, most notably lucrative logging rights that were revoked in 1997 purportedly over the group's signing of the Mae Tha Raw Hta agreement which had a provision supporting the NLD.

The NMSP fought alongside the KNU and was an active member of a number of ethnic alliance fronts including the National Democratic Front (NDF), the Democratic Alliance of Burma (DAB) and the National Council Union of Burma (NCUB) with the latter two including Burman pro-democracy groups.

On 5th of August 2009, Mon Revolution Day, the NMSP announced that it would not transform its armed wing into a Border Guard Force (BGF).

Government: NSCN-K

SUMMARY

Founded: Jan. 1, 1980

Headquarters: Unknown

Operational Area: Lahe, Lay Shi, Hkamti and Nanyun in Sagaing Region Estimated strength: <500

Leader: S. S. Khaplang

The NSCN-K has been fighting to achieve a union between Naga living in the northeast states of India and the Sagaing Region in Myanmar. In 1988, the NSCN split into two fractions; the NSCN-K led by S. S. Khaplang based in northern Lahe and Nanyun townships in Sagaing Region, Myanmar and the NSCN-IM, led by Isak Chisi Swu and Thuingaleng Muivah in India. According to the 2008 Constitution, the Leshi, Lahe and Nanyun townships in Sagaing Region are described as a Naga Self-Administered Zone. Since 2010, the NSCN-K and the Myanmar government have not engaged in armed clashes. After the ceasefire in 2012, many of their soldiers deserted.

Developments

SSPP agreed to negotiations after the government released their leader General Hso Ten and other leading Shan politicians including Khun Htun Oo.

Agreed points:

Ceasefire

Liaison offices will open in Taunggyi, Lashio and Kholan. More offices will be allowed to be opened in other locations.

Panglong terms - non-disintegration of national solidarity and perpetuation of sovereignty at all times based on the Panglong spirit.

Military

Agreed that SSPP/SSA soldiers be allowed to be based in Wanhai and other temporary locations.

Transgression and arms carrying will be allowed under negotiation between both sides.

Will continue talks for ensuring regional peace, stability and development, enabling the troops to earn their living and ensuring lasting peace in the region.

Drugs

Cooperation on eradicating drugs.

Resettlement

Arrangements for improvement of the livelihood and social life of Shan State Progressive Party (SSPP) members and their families in line with the law and in cooperation with the government.

- Resettlement of over 3500 people including SSPP/SSA family members to Mong Kaung sub-Township and Mongshu Township. They also discussed responsibilities for the livelihoods of family members, transportation, better living standards. Also on the agenda were regional development tasks and recuperation of vacant and virgin lands for cultivation of long-lasting trees and seasonal crops.

Ongoing issues:

- working out details for a new village for 350 families in the Honam-Tawng Hio area.
- the govt refuses to discuss ongoing conflicts along the Shwe gas pipeline in northern Shan State. Neither did the two sides talk about Ta Hsarm Pu dam over the Pang river
 - the Myanmar military demanded the SSPP/SSA to withdraw from the area
- more communication needed with Myanmar army regional commanders to avoid future clashes with SSPP/SSA

Political wing: PSLF (latest Palaung political group; same name as the original group that surrendered in 2005)

SUMMARY

Founded: 2009

Headquarters: Mobile

Operational Area: Naungkhio, Kyaukme, Hsipaw, Namlan, Lashio, Kutkai, Namtu, Mann Ton, Mann Sam, Mann Pan in northern Shan state

Estimated strength: 600

Leader: Tar Aik Bone (Chairman), Tar Bone Kyaw (GS)

After the former Palaung State Liberation Front (PSLF) surrendered to the government in 2005, Palaung leaders Tai Aik Bone and Tar Bone Kyaw reformed the party using the same name and continued to fight against the Myanmar military. TNLA is the army wing of PSLF. Currently, TNLA are fighting alongside the KIA and SSPP/SSA against the government in northern Shan state.

After the 2010 elections, the government recognized the areas that Palaung (also known as Ta'ang) inhabit in northern Shan state as an administration zone. However it remains very underdeveloped and there are very few schools and hospitals.

SUMMARY

Founded: Feb. 16, 2011

Headquarters: Chiang Mai, Thailand

The UNFC is the latest coalition of ethnic armed groups. It was renamed and reformed from the Committee for the Emergence of Federal Union (CEFU), founded in Nov. 2010. The UNFC wants to represent all of the ethnic armed groups during peace negotiations with the government.

Previous Ethnic Alliances:

National Democratic Front (NDF), 1976-ongoing

Ethnic Nationalities Council (ENC), 2001-ongoing

Objective:

The UNFC wants to establish a Federal Union in Myanmar. They have already formed the Federal Union Army (FUA) to protect ethnic areas.

11 Member groups:

UNFC members (were also part of CEFU)

- Kachin Independence Organization (KIO)
- New Mon State Party (NMSP)
- Shan State Army-North (SSPP /SSA)
- Karen National Union (KNU)
- Karenni National Progressive Party (KNPP)
- Chin National Front (CNF)

5 new members:

- Lahu Democratic Union (LDU)
- National United Party of Arakan (NUPA) / Arakan National Council (ANC)
- Pa-O National Liberation Organization (PNLO)
- Ta-ang National Liberation Army (TNLA) also known as Palaung State Liberation Front (PSLF)
- Wa National Organization (WNO)

Organization structure:

Each member organization appoints 2-4 individuals for representation in the UNFC Council. Presently, there are 22 members of the UNFC council, 10 are elected central executive committee members.

27 Sept 2012 - USA: A UNFC and National Council of the Union of Burma (NCUB) joint delegation led by KNU Central Executive member David Thackarbaw and Joint General Secretary and Spokesperson for the UNFC Khun Okkar travelled to the US. During this time they met with US and UN officials to talk about Myanmar's ethnic peace process. Other members of the delegation included UNFC Member of Foreign Affairs; Sao Swy Mangrai, UNFC Member of Military Affairs; La Awng and U.S. Representative for the National Council of the Union of Burma (NCUB); Moe Chan.

UNFC AND NCUB "Benchmarks for Renewed Engagement with Burma" statement.

24 Apr 2012 - Tokyo, Japan: Three UNFC Central Executive members, Dr. La Ja, Khun Okkar and Saw David Thackarbaw traveled to Tokyo to talk with the Japanese government. UNFC leaders discussed the current political situation in Myanmar, the UNFC's role in resolving the ongoing conflict and about peace talks between the government and ethnic armed groups.

Developments

The 6 points Ethnic Peace Roadmap: (27/09/2012) - alternative to government's peace roadmap

1. The armed ethnic nationality organizations, political parties, women and youths organizations and civil society organizations will hold meetings to lay down points that will included in the Framework for Political Dialogue.
2. Union government representatives and unified representatives for ethnic armed organizations will hold meetings to establish the Framework for Political Dialogue.

- a. Holding meetings in a place acceptable for both sides.
 - b. Proceedings of the meetings are to be conducted in the presence of neutral international observers and the points agreed upon are to be promulgated jointly for public knowledge.
3. After establishing the Framework for Political Dialogue by representatives of the government and the armed ethnic resistance organizations, conferences of the ethnic peoples are to be held in the states or divisions, as necessary, for clarification and approval.
 4. To hold a national conference of the various nationalities participated by representatives of the ethnic armed organizations, political parties, civil society organizations, women and youth organizations.
 5. A Union conference, participated by an equal number of representatives from the ethnic forces, the democratic forces and the government is to be held in the form acceptable to the three forces, and based on Panlong Spirit; the agreements adopted by the conference are to be regarded as the "Union Accord".
 6. The Union Accord is to be implemented in accordance within a precise time frame.

Demands

UNFC requested to discuss four main issues

- (1) To plan a meeting between UNFC and the government in Japan under the moderation of The Nippon Foundation.
- (2) Ways to solve the ongoing sectarian violence in Rakhine state.
- (3) The implementation of UNFC's Six Point Ethnic Peace Roadmap.
- (4) Ending the fighting between the Kachin Independence Organization (KIO) and Myanmar military.

Informal agreement: (9 November 2012)

- (1) To resolve political issues by political means.
- (2) Hold political dialogue with all armed groups as one and not separately.
- (3) To discuss the following topics during the formal meeting that is being planned at the newly established Myanmar Peace Center (MPC) in Yangon next month: framework for political dialogue, agenda, timeline, technical assistance and logistics.

Government Name: Shan State (North) Special Region-2

Armed wing: United Wa State Army (UWSA)

SUMMARY

Founded: 1989

Headquarters: Pangkham (also known as Phanghsang)

Operational Area: Panghsang, Mongmau, Pangwai, Nahphan, Mongpawt , Mongyan), Hopan

Estimated strength: 30,000

Leader: Bao You Xiang

The UWSP administers 6 designated townships of the Wa Self-Administered Division as stipulated in the 2008 Constitution. The area's official name was announced by decree on Aug. 20, 2010. The UWSP rejected the government's Border Guard Force scheme in 2009. The UWSP maintains close ties with China both politically and economically, and uses Chinese as the party's working language.

The UWSP military wing the United Wa State Army (UWSA) is estimated to be about 30,000 troops and 10,000 auxiliary members. They are the largest ethnic army in Myanmar and reported to be a major player in the opium, heroin and amphetamine drug trade. It was originally formed from members of the Communist Party of Burma (CPB) following its collapse in 1989.
